IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

WASHINGTON—Neat justice would be done if the small countries such as Denmark and Bulgaria should prove Hitler's undoing.

He always has had contempt for the small nation, contempt for the independence and dignity of the weaker person and the weaker people. In the beginning, when nobody was prepared, he found it easy to lay his iron fist on every neighbor from Norway to Bulgaria.

Clapper

Hitler and his military machine did an efficient job. Nothing like it had ever been seen. Military men on the Allied side had not thought that it could be done. But as we are beginning to see now, efficiency is not enough. You can put your heel on the neck of a weaker person. Perhaps you can kill him. You may kill thousands of his neighbors. But somehow you fail to kill the spirit. Modern warfare seems not to have found the way to achieve that. Hitler no doubt thought he had done it. At times it seemed as if he had.

But we see now that it has not been done. In Denmark, the Nazis worked with all of their cunning to develop a model of an occupied country. Denmark was the only occupied country allowed to retain the government elected by its own people. Only Danes, of all occupied peoples, were allowed to listen to the foreign radio. They had caused Hitler little trouble when he went in and he would reward them and show other small countries how loose the Nazi chains would be if they would behave. But even loose chains are heavy. Danes have grown weary of dragging them. Hence the explosions that have forced the Nazis to take harsh measures in Denmark after the mild occupation which has lasted three years and five months.

In Sweden last spring, information coming out of Denmark indicated there would be trouble. On May 18, I wrote about it from Stockholm saying that even when Nazis are on their best behavior they cannot make subject people accept their new order. At that time, it was clear the Nazis had failed to win over the people. So much sabotage had developed that the Nazis persuaded King Christian to appeal for order. Now he has been interned. His army and navy officers are being arrested. After the British bombardment of the Burmeister and Wain workers in Copenhagen on Jan. 27, sabotage increased. Now the Danish fleet has been scuttled.

The Danish people, except for a small minority, never accepted the idea of collaboration, and a strong underground press flourished. Even the censored press was full of a kind of double-talk that passed the German censors.

This is a most embarrassing time for Hitler to be compelled to divert troops to pacify and garrison additional territory. His lines are bending like a hairpin in Russia. The Allies are threatening Italy. Now he must throw the weight of armed force to hold down the lid in Denmark. He must put out the fire that seems to have blazed up in Bulgaria. Finland is weary of tending his chestnuts and would like to pull out of the war with Russia. Sweden feels it is safe now to kick Hitler around a bit and not only has stopped the hauling of German troops through Sweden but is talking up sharply over the German shooting of Swedish fishing boats. That undoubtedly has stirred the resolution of people in Denmark. What an anniversary for Hitler's new disorder.

Democratic ideas have taken a beating in recent years. But some of them will receive glorious vindication if it comes to pass that the weaker victims of Hitler spread the flypaper that gets him down.

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK—Yesterday I got going on the subject of magazines and their sweatshop dealings with writers and the arrogance of some of their editors toward men and women who work in the speculative short-story and article market and today I will give it another whirl because these publications are pretty snooty toward our daily press and I think they have kidded the public into an unchallenged superstition that they really are something special.

Pegler

Did you happen to see Henry Luce's Time this week? It has a piece about Joe Curran, the president of the National Maritime Union, who put himself aboard a ship for a cruise to foreign parts now that the submarine trouble is well under control, and also the picket line which he threw around the World-Telegram. Time neglected, of course, to point out that the pickets weren't all necessarily sailors and that those among them who were sailors had to check in and get their union books stamped to show that they had done their stuff, as ordered, the same as Mussolini's Fascists had to record their presence at those spontaneous popular demonstrations around the British embassy and ours in Rome when il bum wanted to turn on the heat.

Well, there is a picture of Curran and one of me and I don't know where they got Curran's but the way they got mine is another of those stories about the journalistic ethics of magazines.

Several years ago an editor of Life, which also belongs to Luce and gets its ethical standards from him, got in touch with George Bye, the writer's agent, who used to handle Heywood Broun and who still handles the little magazine work that I do, and proposed an old-fashioned dirt-road gutletting between the pair of us for $1000 each.

He was to write about me and vice versa, no holds barred. Broun and I were pretty good friends so we talked it over and decided to take on the job and, faithful to our undertaking, delivered the copy as ordered. There were no fire escapes or slipknots in the deal. The editor knew our styles and the quality of our stuff and this was a firm order. Nevertheless, a little later this guy sent both stories back to Bye and wanted them rewritten, suggesting that each of us get out the morgue envelope on the other to enrich the copy with detail although we lived only a few miles apart, had played poker together maybe 50 times and had known each other since 1917.

We both got sore and told Bye to ask the guy if he was going to keep his agreement or welch on it. Anyway neither of us was going to do the job over and we didn't.

Meantime, like a dope, not knowing as much about the Luce outfit as I do now, I let them send a photographer up to my place, which Time calls an "estate"—and if you think that is an estate you ought to see Luce's palaces and his pied-a-terre in the Waldorf tower—to get some pictures to dress the story. They took some of Heywood, too, at his lake.

So, when the guy welched on his order I demanded the pictures back and he hedged, first saying that the pictures were the business of another department, which is an old dodge of the Luce outfit, and later that I had no interest in them and no right to demand them back.

I insisted nevertheless that the pictures were obtained only on my understanding that they were to be used to dress the story which he had ordered and then refused to pay for, and gave him such a contest that eventually he sent them back and the original films, too.

But I knew they weren't on the level down there so I kept an eye on them, and, sure enough, after a while, when I might have forgotten about the pictures, one of them showed up, not in Life but in Time. There is nothing to be gained by protesting to such people so I let it go. Anyone who would do such a thing in the first place can't be reached by an appeal to journalistic ethics.

Then, this week, opposite Curran's picture they ran another one of those that they held out when the guy pretended to give up the batch obtained as part of the Broun deal. I know it is one of that batch, but if I didn't know it there would be a giveaway in the cutline under the picture which says "Pegler, on a lake."

Now the picture is just a head against a blurred background and you can't tell that the background is a lake but they know it because it was taken against a lake and the whole picture shows a shot of the water.

You are helpless in dealing with such people and you can protect yourself to the extent of having nothing to do with them, but to hear Luce sound off you might get an entirely different idea.

ON BROADWAY-- By Dorothy Kilgallen

Speaking For Myself.

I was listening the other night to young lad-about-town Fred DeCordova, fresh off the train from Louisville, where for the second straight year he had spent the summer putting on that Derby town's municipal light operas. The table-talk was around to the old problem of "what they like in the sticks" and Fred made an observation that struck me as being true, and interesting.

"What people like in the sticks," he said, "is the same thing people like in New York. There are no more sticks. In the old days, a show would go on the road and the comedian would have to change his jokes when the troupe got to Straw Hat, Nebraska, because nobody there understood the Broadway jokes. But all that has changed now. Jack Benny and Fred Allen and the rest of the radio comics tell a joke today in New York, and New Yorkers fall down laughing. At the same split second, they're laughing in the sticks."

Kilgallen

It also always strikes me, every time I see Fred, that the ambitious young players on Broadway make a mistake when they refuse to go on the road or play an out-of-town date. Fred has proven that if you've got it, you can climb to the top from any geographical point. Last year, for instance, he took an unknown kid who had been in one flop in New York, and starred her in his production of "Naughty Marietta." She came through, and from that one job she got another. The second job was the feminine lead in "Oklahoma!"

That was last year, and the kid's name was Joan Roberts. This year, Fred thinks he has uncovered another "sleeper" that everyone has been passing by. She went down to Louisville, did a fine job there, and landed the lead in the road company of "Oklahoma!" Fred says to paste her name in your hat, because she's going to be up there in lights one of these days. Her name is Martha Burnett.

It may be something of a surprise to Dorothy Lamour, the Circe of the South seas, but just the other day I discovered that the sarong has literally (and prosaically) become a Household Word. In advertising various domestic doodads the other day, one of our best-known department stores made a point of listing and even illustrating, a 69-cent notion called a "Broom Sarong."

In case you're interested, a broom sarong is a little laced cotton skirt which covers the upper half of the broom, and to quote the ad copywriter, can be used for cleaning "moldings, ceilings, hard-to-get-at-corners."

The ad didn't explain the connection between Dottie Lamour and a broom, and I must say that as far as I can see, there isn't any.

I am immensely intrigued by the epidemic possibilities suggested by the successive newspaper reports that a Cleveland manager had filed a complaint against Eddie Dowling for reading his lines in a stock presentation of "The Petrified Forest" and that a Canadian producer had brought suit against Earl Carroll because he supplied "ordinary burlesque-type show girls" instead of "the most beautiful girls in the world," as promised.

BIG THREE OF OHIO GOP SET HARMONY TRIP

Schorr and Taft Backing For Bricker Presidential Run Seen In Move.

(By International News Service)

COLUMBUS — A "harmony meeting" which apparently dispells many rumors of rifts in the leadership of Ohio's Republican party is slated for next week when Governor Bricker and Sen. Robert A. Taft are to be the guests of State Chairman Ed D. Schorr at the latter's Upper Michigan summer home, "Boot Island."

The governor and the state's senior senator will go to Boot Island for a "fishing trip" following the Republican post-war planning conference at Mackinac island Monday and Tuesday. It will be the governor's second "fishing trip" in two weeks. Last week he went to Sundance, Wyo., admittedly to talk politics with western party leaders.

In many ways, however, next week's jaunt is even more important to a man who obviously wants to be the 1944 Republican presidential candidate, even if he has never said so in so many words.

The trip will dispell many rumors and give birth to many more. Perhaps most important, it will end talk of a rift between Bricker and Schorr, an important consideration in Bricker's presidential chances.

Schorr is the oldest state chairman in point of service in the nation, and as such is respected and listened to by other state chieftains. An active Bricker campaign on his part would do much to help the governor, while his antagonism would do Bricker considerable harm.

The trip also apparently takes Bricker out of the picture as far as another gubernatorial term is concerned. Schorr is a strong supporter of Cincinnati's Mayor James Garfield Stewart, and it was freely predicted that a fourth term bid by Bricker would bring an open break between the chief executive and the chairman. The "fishing trip" hardly indicates that this is in the offing.

However, there was no attempt to read into the meeting that Bricker will support Stewart's candidacy. Bricker conceivably could withdraw and support some other candidate, possibly Lieut.-Gov. Paul M. Herbert.

The "fishing trip" also may presage an announcement of candidacy by Bricker, and would have dispelled the rumor that Taft was about to "run out" on Bricker and again seek the presidential nomination himself, had not Taft himself spiked that rumor thoroughly in Columbus just two days ago.

"I'm for Bricker," he said flatly. "And I'm a candidate for re-election to the senate."

BELLBOY HELD IN WAC DEATH

Young Man Admits Serving Drinks In Room of Murdered Woman.

(By International News Service)

INDIANAPOLIS — Robert Wolfington, 21-year-old bellboy at the Claypool hotel who told of serving drinks to the room of WAC Corp. Maoma Ridings, found murdered at the hotel Saturday night, was held by police today on a vagrancy charge.

Chief of Police Clifford F. Beeker declined to say what had led to the youth's arrest but said he would be questioned further in the slaying of the 32-year-old army woman, at one time nurse for President Roosevelt in her home town of Warm Springs, Ga.

He was ordered taken into custody when police learned he had not reported for work yesterday, giving the excuse that he wanted to get his uniform cleaned. He was intoxicated and not in condition to be questioned when arrested, police said.

Dr. Roy B. Storms, Marion county coroner who said an autopsy disclosed Corp. Ridings had been criminally assaulted, declared an eight-inch black ink mark had been found on the woman's right leg. He said she died from a heavy blow on the head, apparently from a broken whisky bottle found in the room, and from loss of blood.

Robbery, police said, also may have been a motive to the crime as only 21 cents were found in the WAC's purse. This was considered strange as Corp. Ridings had come to Indianapolis from nearby Camp Atterbury apparently to spend the week-end.

Mifflin Township Widow To Be Buried Thursday.

Funeral services will be held Thursday at 1:30 p. m. for Mrs. Hester A. Myers, 86, widow of the late M. E. Myers of Mifflin, who died Monday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Howard E. Morse, Detroit, following a lingering illness.

A picture and brief sketch about Sgt. Cameron Wallington, son of Mr. and Mrs. I. D. Wallington, 55 Wellington avenue, appeared recently in the Cleveland News. They are with a group of pictures and an article concerning men from the Cleveland area who are stationed at Greensboro, N. C. The article says that Wallington is doing some important work in the statistical control unit and expects to attend Officer Candidate School. Sgt. Tom Tarbox, a former News staff writer, now stationed at Greensboro, wrote the article.

Before Clarence C. Lurz left the Mansfield fire department yesterday after nearly 25 years of service, he was guest at a farewell dinner — prepared by himself. Lurz has been chef for firemen at Central station and at their request he prepared chicken and noodles and baked a cake for his party at the station. There were tears in some of the men's eyes when Acting Chief L. R. Zimmerman paid Lurz a tribute for his faithful service and companionship in the department. Zimmerman said today that Dan Snyder will succeed Lurz as head chef for the firemen.

One radish like the kind that Robert Baker, 14-year-old East Mansfield gardener, grows is enough for a meal for the average family. Young Baker brought two of the big vegetables, weighing two pounds each, to The News-Journal. They resemble huge white sweet potatoes and despite their size, they are crisp and not too hot to eat, Baker said. The young gardener said the radishes are of the "California Wonder" variety and were grown under ordinary conditions.

Croquet sets, volley balls, balls and bats which are the property of the Johnny Appleseed Boy Scout headquarters, have been popular items borrowed by Mansfield picnickers during the past several months, according to Al Fendrick, Scout field director. Nearly 5,000 have made use of the picnic games this summer. Fendrick said service will be continued through the fall, if persons desiring the items register at the Boy Scout headquarters.

CONFUSION ON INCOME FORMS GETTING WORSE

Harried Taxpayers Ask What's What as Harried Treasury Faces Deluge of Work.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Public confusion over the Sept. 15 "pay-as-you-go" tax declaration mounted today as tax information centers in most cities were jammed to overflowing by would-be filers seeking information on how to fill out the complicated forms.

Under the withholding tax law, passed earlier this year, single persons earning more than $2,700 a year, and married persons earning more than $3,500 annually are required to submit estimates of their 1943 incomes. They must also estimate their 1943 tax liability, compute their victory taxes and withholding levies already collected by their employers, and make additional payments in order to get themselves on a true pay-as-you-go basis.

The treasury department estimates that about one-third of the nation's 42,000,000 taxpayers, will be required to file the Sept. 15 form, and the majority of these will find it necessary to make additional tax payments.

Officials cautioned that the Sept. 15 declaration is not an income tax collection form in itself, but is only an "estimate" and that tax forms on 1943 income will have to be filed by March 15, 1944, as in the past. Thus, for the first time in United States tax history, individuals are being required to file at least two tax forms on one year's income.

There is the further fact that some persons may have to file three and possibly four declarations, because amendments to their estimated income and tax liabilities must be filed as their incomes change if penalties ranging up to 10 per cent of their total tax debt are to be avoided.

Stringent penalties have been provided, likewise, for persons who fail to file the Sept. 15 declaration, and for those who greatly under-estimate the amount of taxes they will owe the federal government on 1943 incomes.

Meantime informed quarters in Washington expressed the opinion that the treasury department, already worked to the breaking point with the flood of wartime returns, would find the Sept. 15 declaration too much to cope with.

EXPECTS APPEAL IN CHURCH ROW

Attorney Says Members Will Carry Expulsion Fight To Supreme Court.

(By Associated Press)

MOUNT VERNON — An attorney for the Vine street Church of Christ board predicted today the board would carry its fight to expel 15 members "to the supreme court, if necessary."

C. M. McClintock, Canton lawyer, said he felt certain board members would vote this week to appeal the decision of Common Pleas Judge Fred W. Wickham of Delaware, who ruled yesterday the expulsion was illegal and void.

"The board is fighting for the right of a church to govern ecclesiastical affairs without court interference unless a civil right is involved," the attorney declared. "In this case, the board feels it has every right to prohibit the defendants from entering church property because they failed to obey rules set down by the church officials and were insubordinate in their actions. We will seek recognition of that right in the supreme court, if necessary."

He denied the only way a member could be expelled was for "gross immorality after a congregational trial" as Judge Wickham had stated in his decision. Earlier, the judge refused to pass on the members' reinstatement on the grounds he lacked authority to do so.

Robert L. Carr, lawyer-spokesman for the 15 defendants, asserted the court's decision also reinstated by inference some 700 other parishioners who were dropped from the church rolls last March.

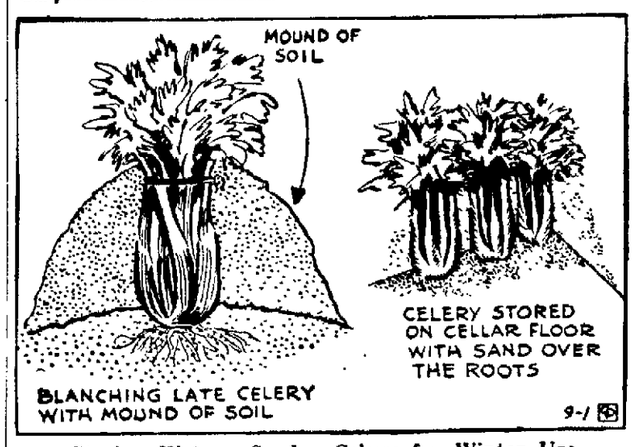
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Storing Victory Garden Celery for Winter Use.

By DEAN HALIDAY
Released by Central Press Ass'n.

Those who have grown celery in their Victory garden are concerned, of course, with storing it for winter use. There are several ways in which celery can be stored.

Celery which is to be used early can be left right in the garden and banked with earth, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. Celery for later use can be stored in trenches. Make the trench 10 to 12 inches wide and deep enough so that the tops of the leaves will only be two or three inches above soil level. Pack the celery in close together with whatever soil will adhere to the roots. The stalks and leaves must be dry when stored. Boards are nailed together to form a trough-shaped roof over the trench. This roof should shed rain or melting snow. During warm weather this roof should be lifted and braced with a stone to give ample ventilation. As severe cold weather sets in, add earth, straw, hay or other insulating material over the roof to give protection against freezing.

When there is only a small amount of celery to be stored, it should be dug with roots and soil attached and placed in moist sand on the cellar floor, as illustrated, or in a deep box having sand or loose soil in the bottom. Set the box in a cool cellar and keep the soil moist, but the tops must be kept dry.

Work Finished On Restoring Lake Level at Park

With improvements at North Lake park nearing completion, the park lake has been restored to its former level and water is pouring over a new dam at the east end of the lake, Park Superintendent Frank Burton said today.

During recent weeks, the old bridge and dam at the lower end of the lake have been removed and replaced by a new dam and spillway. A roadway over the top of a big tile replaced the bridge. The work was done by R. O. Darling, Mansfield contractor.

Burton said park employes would re-set the cannons, build new steps, and re-seed the hill back of the pavilion where the contracting firm on the other project hauled most of the earth that was excavated at the end of the lake.

Landscaping of the newly-excavated areas will not be done until next spring after the recently-moved earth has settled, Burton said.

Have a "Coke" = Cead Mile Failte
(A HUNDRED THOUSAND WELCOMES)

...or how Americans make friends in Ireland

Cead Mile Failte—a hundred thousand welcomes—says the kindly Irishman when he meets a stranger. The American soldier says it another way. Have a "Coke", says he, and in three words he has said Greetings, pal. It's a phrase that works as well in Belfast as in Boston. Around the globe Coca-Cola stands for the pause that refreshes—has become the high-sign between friendly-minded people.

"Coke" = Coca-Cola
It's natural for popular names to acquire friendly abbreviations. That's why you hear Coca-Cola called "Coke".

	YES	NO
Do you have poor digestion?	☐	☐
Do you feel headachy after eating?	☐	☐
Do you get sour or upset easily?	☐	☐
Do you feel tired—listless?	☐	☐

Now everyone knows that to get the good out of the food you eat—you must digest it properly. But what most people don't know is that Nature must produce about two pints of the digestive juice—liver bile—each day to help digest your food. If Nature fails—your food may remain undigested—lie sour and heavy in your digestive tract.

Thus, it is simple to see that one way to aid digestion is to increase the flow of liver bile. Now, Carter's Little Liver Pills start to increase this flow quickly for thousands—often in as little as thirty minutes. When bile flow increases, your digestion may improve. And, soon you're on the road to feeling better—which is what you're after.

Don't depend on artificial aids to counteract indigestion—when Carter's aid digestion after Nature's own order, when taken as directed. Get Carter's Little Liver Pills today—at any druggists—only 25¢. You will be glad you did.

SORORITY SISTERS LEARN WEDDING DATE

Miss Patricia Oberlander Guest of Honor at Party at Mansfield-Leland Hotel; Couple Plan October Nuptials.

AT A DESSERT BRIDGE in the Mansfield-Leland hotel club rooms, last evening, sixteen sorority sisters and friends of Miss Patricia Oberlander learned of her approaching marriage to Pvt. Robert Henry of Fort Bragg, N. C.

Hostess at the lovely party was Mrs. V. H. Oberlander, mother of the bride-elect.

Announcement of the wedding was made when dessert was served. On the filler of dainty sandwiches tied with white ribbon were the words, "It's October—Pat and Bob." The exact date of the coming nuptials depends upon Pvt. Henry's furlough.

Bridge was in session at four tables. High score prizes in the diversion were awarded to Miss Gerry Fisher and Miss Frances Brown.

A beautiful gardenia corsage, sent by Pvt. Henry for the occasion, was worn by the honoree.

Music was furnished by three of Miss Oberlander's sorority sisters. They were the Misses Maxene Williams, Jennie Lou Gannaway and Ethel Mae Bogan.

Guests at the party included the prospective bridegroom's mother, Mrs. R. LaVerne Henry, Woodhill road, and the Misses Brown, Fisher, Bogan, Gannaway, Williams, Judy Kelley, Marjorie Scott, Adaline Wilging, Lillian Art, Mary Ann Kuhn, Margie Schwein, Jane McFadden, Virginia Casperson, Joan Watson, Barbara Oberlander, Patty Stuhldreher and Joan Eichin.

The Oct. 26 meeting will be held with Mrs. Lester Downs, 148 East Second street. Associate hostesses will be Mrs. Cleo Buchter and Mrs. Brannon.

Miss Mary Arnold, Sgt. E. P. Eberhard Wed August 15

The wedding of Miss Mary Arnold and Sgt. Edward P. Eberhard is being announced today. Miss Arnold is the daughter of Mrs. Bert Shull of this city and E. Arnold, Shelby. Sgt. Eberhard is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Snyder, Wooster road.

The service was read for the couple Aug. 15 at 3:30 p. m. by Rev. C. Snyder, in the home of the bridegroom's parents. The home was decorated with garden flowers.

The bride wore a gown of white silk jersey and white accessories. Her shoulder corsage was of red roses.

A small reception was held immediately after the ceremony for close friends and the immediate families. The refreshment table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom.

After a brief wedding trip, Sgt. Eberhard returned to Camp Swift, Texas, where he is stationed with the medical detachment.

AUXILIARY MEETS.

The American Legion Auxiliary Bridge club met last evening at the Legion home for its regular meeting. High score prizes were awarded to Mrs. Virgil Hageman and Mrs. Hollis Moorehead. The next meeting will be held Sept. 14, with Mrs. William Fisher as hostess.

Thrifty War Styles Click In Britain

BRITAIN LIKES IT: These are the government controlled "utility" styles of Britain. Eastex off-white cloth coat above has tied belt, no buckle. Felt handbag is unrationed. Gloves are imitation pigskin. Sumrie suit is made of men's wear fabric. Eric Hart blouse is rayon linen. Dress, a Berkatex utility model, was designed by Norman Hartnell, in red and navy rayon linen, for slim wartime budgets.

LONDON—The war has had one striking effect on women's fashions in Britain. The lower bracket wage groups are becoming slowly but surely better dressed. Their more prosperous compatriots can buy much less than they did before rationing started because their purchases are limited. Slowly but surely the good clothes they had when rationing started in 1941 are showing signs of wear and tear. And they cannot replace them garment for garment, for they have no more coupons than their poorer sisters, even though they can spend more money on what they do buy.

A two-piece dress and short jacket would take 21 coupons, so to buy it a woman would have to spend all her four-month period's stock. And what would she do for stockings and underwear?

Suits are becoming more and more popular, for the clever woman realizes that she can make several outfits from one good suit by ringing the changes with blouses and sweaters. But a tailored wool suit would take 18 coupons and that leaves only two extra, which will buy neither a pair of full fashioned silk stockings ,which takes 3 coupons, nor a pair of shoes, which takes 5.

But the Board of Trade has done a good job. "Utility" clothes made from government controlled material are excellent. Two thousand manufacturers have been designated to make utility clothes, being guaranteed regular supplies of materials.

British stenographers, clerks, and shop girls before the war were never as smart-looking as their American counterparts. Salaries were and still are considerably lower in comparison. But this was not the chief reason for the difference. Cheap clothes in the United States have always been smart, well cut and plentiful. Any little government clerk in Washington could turn herself out smartly in inexpensive clothes. They might not last very long, but she could get by in them at the smartest restaurant for a special date. Before the war, the English girl with a small salary usually had to be content with dull clothes without cut or style. Now, by buying "Utility" she can get smart clothes at prices well within the limits of her pocketbook.

Norman Hartnell, who made the clothes worn by the Queen on her visit to the United States and Canada in 1938, is designing for Berkatex. A group of designers, including Molyneux, have undertaken to produce between them a number of models for utility manufacturers. The department stores are selling Molyneux and Hartnell "utility" models from about ten dollars.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

I could not tell Marion's despairing sweetheart that Dicky or Harry Underwood would have leaped into the car, knocked the driver unconscious, driven the car to the nearest police station before any nearby accomplices could act, and thereby accomplish Marion's rescue. Ronald has neither the physique, the daredevil temperament nor the experience of the older men, and such an action, forbidden as it was to him by Marion's signal for silence, would not be natural to him at all.

Not Ready For Rescue.

Of course I realized what her signal for silence meant. She was not yet ready to be rescued. She was still under the thrall of a belief that terrible danger would threaten Carolyn, or some one else dear to her, if she did not remain in captivity—a captivity which I was sure she had voluntarily entered in a high spirit of self-sacrifice.

I was not at all sure that she would have come away willingly with Ronald if he had rescued her. But I could not say that either to the distraught boy, so I took refuge in a platitude that was neither truth nor falsehood, though holding elements of both.

"I think you are being unjust to yourself, Ronald," I told him. "You must not use the word 'failed.' You did not fail Marion. Indeed I doubt if she expected you to try to rescue her. She knew how impossible a task it was, hence her signal for silence."

"Then why did she lift her glasses, and let me see her eyes?" he asked drearily.

"For two reasons," I answered briskly. "One because she longed to see a flash of recognition and love in your face. Remember how long it has been since she saw a familiar face—and second because she wished to let you know and her mother and other dear ones through you that she was alive and well. She did look well, did she not?"

He was thoughtful for a second, then answered slowly.

"Yes, she did. As far as I could tell, that is, she looked so queer with that white hair. But how she can look well under captivity and abuse, I don't see."

"Captivity, yes, Ronald," my father broke in, with a quiet air of authority; "but abuse—no. I'm quite sure that she is being treated very well. Her captors want to get certain information, and they believe that holding her as a hostage is their only means of obtaining it. Therefore they will treat her with all consideration. Indeed, I would not be surprised if the motor ride was not designed to give her outdoor air and a certain respite from captivity, although I am inclined to agree with you that her ankles were shackled.

A Great Consolation.

"I am glad you had the impression that she was looking well," he went on. "It ought to be a great consolation to you, and to her mother and stepfather as well when we tell them."

"Oh, yes!" Ronald agreed. "They must hear about it." But his voice was listless, and I saw that he was feeling the reaction from the rush of terror and distress at his own failure to rescue his sweetheart which had swept him into something very close to hysteria.

"Don't you think, Ronald?" I asked softly, thinking to divert his mind, "that we ought to let Aunt Katharine and Uncle Dicky hear about this? They went into the next apartment when you telephoned, and they are there now."

"Oh, yes. I'll go in to them and tell them by all means," he said. "Perhaps they can help us some. That is, I can do. I believe I shall go mad if I keep thinking of how near I was to her, and yet I didn't see her."

I put a little gentleness to my [illegible] and we moved quickly into the corridor and thence through the connecting door into the communicating suite. As soon as he had left the room, I bent forward, and took Ronald's cold hands into mine.

"Listen to me, Ronald," I said firmly. "You haven't failed Marion, but you will if you don't snap out of this, and pull yourself together. Remember that you are the one to bring us the glorious news that Marion is alive and well. If nothing else comes of your discovery, we are that much to the good. And perhaps who knows?—if Marion is allowed to get away from her prison occasionally, she may be able to send us some other message."

I wondered if it were intuition or more wishful thinking which prompted my conviction that the shrilling of the telephone the next instant heralded such a message. I was answering it as my father, Dicky and Katharine came back into the room, and I said, "Wait a minute!" into the telephone. Setting the receiver down I went up to the group.

"It's the voice of a stranger," I whispered. "A queer husky voice and it says it has a very important message for Mrs. Richard Graham and nobody else. Who shall I do?"

"The Authority on Authorities"

"SMOTHER PLAY" PRETTY

One of the rarest plays in the game is also one of the most beautiful — what advanced cardsmen call the "smother." It is used to trap a hostile trump which seems so adequately guarded that it cannot be captured. In its operation, one defender is obliged to lead a suit which can be trumped by everybody else, with the last player on the trick having the highest trump plus a card of some other suit. If the opponent who plays just before him puts on the guarder honor, that top one kills it, if he puts on a smaller trump, the trick is won by an intermediate trump used by the second player on the trick.

West's obvious lead of the spade K was made, followed by the A, which South rufted. Going after the diamonds, he sent the Q through and was brought up with a start when East discarded a spade. Now it appeared as if a trick must be lost to the well-guarded K, as well as one in hearts. If that happened, he was down as a spade already had been dropped.

Study, however, showed South a chance for the "smother play," if the opponents' distribution in the other suits was right. Essaying it, South scored three clubs with the last taken in dummy, ruffed out the dummy's final spade, took in the heart K and A, and then led the heart 9 from dummy, hoping East would have to take it. He did, and had nothing to return but black cards, of which everybody else was void. He chose a club.

South played his diamond J, retaining the 10. What could West do? With the diamond K-8, if he played the K, dummy's A would kill it and South's 10 take the final trick. So he played the 8, whereupon the heart 6 was tossed from dummy, the diamond J holding the trick. The diamond A then, of course, took the final trick.

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, Sept. 2, 1943

A revolutionary turn in events may project the affairs as well as the life and all its objectives and interests into new highs of adventure, romance and experience. A sudden visitation may have dramatic, thrilling or far-reaching effect on the future life and its fortunes. There may be swift action, quick moves, new enterprise, all under exceptional stimuli for achievement, recognition and rich returns, albeit having many annoyances and menaces calling for complete poise and discretion. Sign papers cautiously. Seek favors and promotion, cultivate powerful friends.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a period of great adventures, dramatic achievements and far reaching joys and crises, which may turn the life into fresh grooves of happiness, accomplishment and approbation. Exceptional events precipitate this, with much enterprise, initiative, constructive responses to high stimuli in the physical, mental, emotional and business affairs. Under the stress and commotion be careful not to sign papers carelessly or open other channels to deception or fraud. Keep poised and sane, but let the gods dispense their breath-taking benefices.

A child born on this day may be blessed with extraordinary talents, inventive genius and ability.

EASY CLEANING

Homemakers appreciate the ease with which porcelain enameled utensils may be cleaned. Scraping and scouring are unnecessary, even when food sticks to the pan. Simply soak it in hot water to loosen the stubborn particles.

HAVE TROUBLE KEEPING "REGULAR"?

TRY THIS HEALTH DRINK FIRST

Juice of 1 lemon in glass of water first thing on arising

Has a natural laxative effect for most people, and it aids digestion, supplies needed vitamins, builds resistance, too!

Here's a surprisingly simple way to avoid the usual harsh laxatives.

Most people find that the juice of one lemon in a glass of water, taken first thing on arising, is all they need to insure prompt, normal elimination—gently. And lemon and water is good for you.

Lemons Build Health! Lemons are among the richest sources of vitamin C, which restores energy, helps you resist colds and infection. They're the only known source of vitamin P (citrin) and supply valuable amounts of B_1. They alkalinize—aid digestion. Millions not troubled with constipation take lemon and water daily just as a health builder.

Why not keep regular with this refreshing morning drink that builds health too? Try it ten days, first thing on arising—see if you don't benefit!

P.S.—LEMON & SODA - Some prefer juice of 1 lemon in half glass water with ½ to ½ teaspoon baking soda (bicarbonate) added. Drink as foaming quiets.

HELL AND HIGH WATER

CHAPTER X

Sitting on the bed, Bob dragged a boot from his foot and dropped it on the floor. The sag of his shoulders showed depression.

"We've lost them," he said hopelessly. "We could have caught them with their loot."

"You're taking this hard, kid," Sid answered.

"Why wouldn't I?" The voice of the young man was bitter. "If I'd kept my mouth shut; if I hadn't showed that bit of cloth to Sunderland, I could have been on my way to ride those fellows down. They framed a murder on my friend, and if I had played my cards close to the belly I might have saved him."

"I don't get you," Sid replied, sifting tobacco into a paper for a cigaret.

Bob told for the third time that day the story of Cle Hightower and the forlorn hope he had of saving him.

"Sunderland is some biggity," the old timer admitted. "Once he gets an idee in his head all tarnation can't pry it out. Well, you've done all you could. After all, those scoundrels haven't got away yet. Let's sleep." He lay down on the bed, yawned half a dozen times, shut his eyes.

Bob lay staring at the ceiling. He could see no way out.

A sound at the door startled him. He heard the key turn. Someone tiptoed into the room and moved into the slant of moonlight pouring through the window.

It was Sally Collins. A forefinger was at her lips. Her shining eyes met Bob's. She beckoned to him.

Bob slid from the bed and pulled on his trousers. The snores ceased. He flung a look at his companion and saw that Sid was watching him. If the man raised a cry his chance of escape was gone.

But Sid did not either speak or cry. He grinned. His eyes closed, and he turned his face to the wall. The snores began again.

Bob slipped on his coat and picked up his boots, then soft-footed from the room. Sally locked the door slowly and gave him her hand. She led him along the dark passage and down stairs. They left the house by way of the kitchen. The rain had ceased. Stars were out, though scudding clouds were still in the sky.

Sally dropped his hand. "My horse is in the stable," she whispered, "a roan with white stockings."

He murmured. "I'll never forget this."

She blushed. "There's a package of sandwiches on the oats bin," she told him. "If you turn loose that horse, anywhere within forty miles of here, he'll come home."

"I hope you won't get into trouble over this."

"No danger," she smiled up at him, then turned and ran into the kitchen. He heard the bolt pushed home.

Bob rode to the rim of the park where the C Bar C cattle ranged. This was new country to him. The best he could do was to guess at directions. If he kept going south and east he would strike the railroad. After that he would know where he was.

Sally's roan was a good traveler. The miles fell behind rapidly as the night grew older. Twice Bob stopped to rest his mount. As he reached the railroad a faint flicker of light appeared in the sky. He guessed that he had struck the line four or five miles north of Mulhall. To avoid that settlement he bore to the left sharply and came to the Cimarron east of Guthrie.

Across the prairie he saw a sod house and windmill. He rode toward them through buffalo grass and pea vines. Two men were talking at the corral gate as he rode in. One leaned against the wheel of a covered wagon carrying a woman and three children.

Bob asked the settler if he knew of a good saddle horse for sale.

"You want to swap yours for a fresh one?" asked the farmer.

"No, I want to buy one."

Five minutes later at a cost of forty-two dollars and a half sack of smoking tobacco Bob had acquired a likely-looking buckskin. He arranged with the mover to tie the roan to the back of his wagon and turn it loose the other side of Mulhall.

Then he rode off. All afternoon he traversed unsettled country. Once he saw another covered wagon in the distance. There was no evidence of permanent settlers. Lee made his night camp on Dry Fork somewhere between Chandler and the Sac & Fox Agency.

Next day he crossed the north fork of the Canadian. Toward evening he came upon cowboys working stuff for the Wagon Wheel outfit and spent that night with them. They had not heard of the train robbery nor had they seen any suspicious riders going toward the Choctaw Nation.

That nobody of whom he had made inquiries had seen the Hickorys did not surprise Bob. He had traveled fast, and he believed he was now ahead of the bandits.

Near Wewoka he met a member of the Creek police and warned him to be on the lookout for the train robbers. The chances were that the gang would split up about this point and travel the rest of the way home in pairs. They would feel by this time that they were pretty safe from pursuit.

Bob crossed the Canadian near White Chimneys on the ferry, went through the Shawnee Hills by the wagon road pass and reached McAlester in the late afternoon.

He bought a Colt's .45 and ammunition at a hardware store where he asked if United States marshals were in town. The storekeeper said Whit Carson passed two hours earlier. He would be at the hotel for supper.

Bob turned to leave the store and suddenly stopped. His name jumped at him from a poster on the wall.

$100 REWARD

For the arrest of Bob Lee, wanted for participating in the Santa Fe train hold-up near Perry, August 22. When last seen was wearing cowboy boots and hat, gray jean trousers, blue coat and vest with small checks. Has probably changed his name. Lee is short, slender, and wiry. Blue eyes, curly brown hair, pleasant smile. Excellent teeth. Good manners. Unarmed when last seen, but probably has secured weapons since.

Lee's eyes lifted from the poster to find the storekeeper staring at him with open mouth.

"I'm Bob Lee, a cowboy for the JAB outfit on the Boggy. I reckon you're Mr. Emery," he explained calmly.

"Yes," the other answered.

"How badly do you want a hundred dollars, Mr. Emery?" Bob asked blandly.

"I'm not interested in arresting men."

"That's good. But it says good citizens knowing where I am should get in touch with the nearest officer or write to Sheriff Sunderland. Aren't you a good citizen?"

"I don't hunt trouble. Let Sunderland find you if he wants you."

"I'll bet six bits you're wondering how long it will be before it is safe to slip out the back door and run up to the hotel for a little talk with Marshal Carson. Since you are going anyhow, take him a message from me. Tell him I said this Santa Fe hold-up was a Hickory job. Chances are they are within twenty miles of the Canadian right now heading for home. There were six men in it, the four Hickorys, Phil Ralston, and Rush Greer. Don't forget the names. No need wasting his time over me. If he will wire Broderick of the JAB ranch, he will get a clean bill of health for me."

Bob got down from the counter and showed his atractive teeth in another smile.

"So long, Mr. Emery. Give Carson my love. But don't hurry. Better not leave the store for ten minutes."

Lee strolled out of the store, mounted and rode out-of-town.

As soon as he passed the outskirts of McAlester, he put the buckskin to a gallop. Whit Carson would come for him the minute Emery told his story. His mount had covered many miles since dawn and was in no condition for a long chase. He decided it would be best to slip into the brush and remain hidden.

He was torn between two plans, ride back to the JAB, raise an unofficial posse among the ranch riders and try to intercept the bandits as they rode to the Hackberry Creek country or to patrol the fords of the Canadian and try to learn definitely for which of their haunts the outlaws would head. Whichever he chose, the chance of failure was great. He decided to play a lone hand for a few hours longer.

Bob swung into the brush in the direction of the Shawnee Hills. His idea was to get back to the river, make a night camp, and at break of day start inquiries about parties crossing the stream.

He was in the lower hills, moving along a ridge, when a beam of light showed from a draw below. Swinging from the saddle, he tied the horse and moved down a shoulder leading from the ridge. Presently he stood on a little bluff where he could see the light again. He was near enough now to make out the figures of men sitting around a fire.

Bob crept nearer, taking advantage of a dip that hid his approach. He was within a few feet of the blaze when next he saw it. Sitting on his heels facing Bob was Ed Hickory. The man reached out, picked a branch from the fire, and lit his pipe. Lying beside him, face down and chin on hands, lounged Rush Greer. Phil Ralston replenished the fire. The fourth camper had his back to Bob and the watcher did not recognize him. Young Cass Hickory came out of the brush and joined the others.

The outlaws were taking no precautions against surprise. Clearly they felt that they had eluded pursuit.

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

The national tennis championships are on this week at Forest Hills.

Watty Slabaugh left last night for New York on a business trip for Westinghouse.

Anyone finding any connection between the two above items is just an old meanie and a stinker.

The two are merely coincidental, so Watty tells me. And I am an innocent kind of a guy who believes everything people tell me.

It was also coincidental that Watty found himself in New York on business for Westinghouse a year ago at this time, and on that occasion he found time to wander out by the courts to see Jinx Falkenberg bat a tennis ball around.

And so he reported to me on a postcard, and I passed the word along in this column.

Mr. Slabaugh returned home.

"What's the idea?" his bossmen at Westinghouse greeted him. "You think we send you to New York just to watch Jinx Falkenberg play tennis? (Confidentially, how was she?)

"So you see," says Watty to me before leaving last night, "this trip this year is strictly for business. Besides," he sighs, "Jinx Falkenburg won't be there this year."

I have assumed that Watty adequately took care of the business on which Westinghouse sent him a year ago, and without the Falkenburg to distract him he probably will do the same with the business this year.

From the pictures I see of this year's contestants at Forest Hills I do not look for Watty to suffer much distraction at all. What I mean is, anyone who goes to see Louise Brough play tennis for any other reason than an interest in tennis is wasting time that could be better spent at Minsky's.

"Speaking of business," says Watty, businesslike, "I have some unfinished business out at Forest Hills at that, and I hope to get it taken care of in my spare time.

"You see, my train goes right past Forest Hills, and there is no reason why I cannot step off the train in the evening and spend a few minutes talking to Shirley Fry, the Akron youngster we are bringing to Woodlawn tennis club for an exhibition this month.

"I hope to complete arrangements for the exhibition which probably will be a week from Sunday, or maybe a week from Saturday."

Another Mansfielder was catching a train for the east last night. It was that venerable sage of old time baseball, Harry Albrecht, assistant sergeant-at-arms of the Ohio senate.

Harry was leaving for two weeks' visit with relatives in New York and Philadelphia, and possibly Boston, and naturally he expects to take in as many big league games in those spots as the boys will play for him.

"I don't know about watching those Giants, though," says Harry. "If the Bums are bums, those Giants are strictly tramps."

Phillies Hit Usual Gait Again, Which Isn't Good

By JUDSON BAILEY

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The drought has set in again for William Drought Cox, the victory-thirsty president of the Philadelphia Phillies.

It was five weeks ago yesterday that the old Yale Blue saw red and fired Bucky Harris, his manager with a background of 20 years as a major league pilot, and hired Fred Fitzsimmons, former pitching star of the New York Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers.

Harris was ousted after the club had lost six games in a row and 11 out of 14. Under Fitzsimmons the Phillies turned right around and won 11 of their next 14 games, but now Cox's collection of castoffs has returned to what probably is its normal gait.

Since their early spurt under Fitzsimmons, the Phillies have lost 14 out of 18 contests and last night dropped their seventh straight for the club's longest losing streak of the season.

The latest loss was 4-2 to the Brooklyn Dodgers, who completed a sweep of their four-game series and moved into third place in the National League.

Kirby Higbe pitched six-hit ball and the Dodgers clinched their conquet in the third inning when Luis Rodriguez Olmo tripled one run across and then scored himself on an error by Catcher Dee Moore, a former Dodger.

Brooklyn's return to third place was gained with the help of the St. Louis Cardinals, who beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-2 on a two-run homer by Harry (Little Dixie) Walker in the ninth inning.

The Cincinnati Reds preserved their grasp on second place by nosing out the Chicago Cubs 3-2 in a duel between Bucky Walters and Paul Derringer, former teammates on the Reds. Derringer pitched five-hit ball while Walters gave up nine, but Bucky kept the Cubs' blows scattered and himself produced a triple and scored two runs.

At Boston, the Braves gained revenge on Van Lingle Mungo for the two-hit shut-out he pitched against them last Saturday. Nate Andrews retaliated with a four-hit hurling job and Elmer Nieman hit a three-run homer, a triple and a single to score three times himself and drive in three runs for a 6-0 triumph over the New York Giants.

No games were scheduled in the American League.

Sport Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK—(AP)—The public is always what? . . . After the starting gate at Aqueduct busted down Wednesday and the favorite was left at the post in a "flag" start, the racing commission ordered the tracks to keep a spare on hand hereafter . . . But that didn't help the customers who had bet nearly $62,000 on Light Lady . . . And while the fight fans still were cheering Henry Armstrong's decision to retire for good after his dismal showing against Ray Robinson, Hank up and decided to go through with one more against Slugger White in Los Angeles because the contract already had been signed . . . Wonder if the fellows ever stopped to think that they have an unwritten contract with the public, too—with a clause that says "if you can't give the kind of show we pay for, get out?"

Al Simmons took his seven year old son for a swing around the American league this summer . . . After watching for some time while his dad either decorated the bench or tried with little success to get a few hits, the youngster asked: "Pop, do you get as much pay as the other players." . . . Simmons allowed that he got about the same as most and maybe a little more than some, then inquired what prompted the question . . . "Well, I've been watching," said the kid, "and you don't seem to do as much as they do."

If you need a chilling breeze some day, ask Clark Griffith about Rip Sewell's "new" blooper pitch . . . It was only about 40 years ago that Griff used to kid the batters until they were ready to murder either the ball or the pitcher and then toss up a soft one underhand and watch 'em break their backs swinging before it got there . . . Richard Bromberg, son of the New York World-Telly boxing writer, is four years old today and Poppa Lester had an "extra" printed to tell his colleagues about it . . . Bobo Newsom is a Senator again and maybe this time they'll give him the job for which he is best qualified—Speaker.

When Pvt. Joe Hennessy of Camp Roberts, Calif., a former writer on Outdoor Topics, attended a recent Minnesota reunion at Paso Robles, it was only natural for him to enter the tall story contest . . . After whoppers that were long as well as tall, Pvt. Hennessy arose and remarked: "Boys, I'd rather be taking a 20-mile hike in the army any day than be catching those big muskies in Lake of the Woods" . . . They awarded Joe the prize without further discussion.

Camp Lee, Va., which had to cancel most of its ambitious football schedule last fall, is getting up another team with Pvt. Warren Casey, former Harvard center, and Lieut. Marshal Spivey, Texas A. and M back, as coaches. The Redskins, Giants and Dodgers have promised to play the stay-at-home "Travelers" and games with Virginia colleges are being sought . . . Because some key players have been transferred, others injured and new candidates haven't time for practice, Fort Sheridan, Ill., has cancelled the rest of its baseball schedule.

Globe Takes Golf Title

Pete Zeides Turns on Heat For Linster.

News-Journal golf league ended its season last evening at Possum Run with Globe Steel winning the championship. Although a number of postponements remain to be played off, they will not affect the championship as Globe has a nine-point advantage.

Pete Zeides took medal honors last evening with a one-under-par 35 in as hot a streak of golf in the stretch as the league has seen all summer.

Three down to Pete Linster with four to go, Zeides got a life when Linster missed a short putt on No. 6.

Then Zeides got started. He sank an approach on No. 7 for a birdie two, dropped a long putt on No. 8 for a birdie three, and canned another approach on No. 9 for a birdie three and the match. Linster shot a par 36.

Segura Picked As Favorite

Navy Takes Schroeder From Scene of Combat.

NEW YORK—(INS)—Francisco (Pancho) Segura, of Ecuador, seemed slated to take the national singles title at Forest Hills today, as naval orders suddenly removed Ensign Ted Schroeder from competition.

With defending champ Schroeder removed from the third naval district, which includes the scene of combat, Segura, who has won all his 1943 net contests, seemed about to become the first South American to carry off the American net title.

Ranking behind Segura, now that Schroeder is out of the picture, is Frankie Parker, who was runner-up to Schroeder last year. Also competing against the favored Segura will be Seaman Jack Kramer, of the coast guard, Naval Lieuts. Joe Hunt and Elwood Cooke, Pvt. Seymour Greenberg of the army air forces reserve, Pfc Bitsey Grant, Ensign Harris Everett, and Pvt. Gilbert Hunt, of the army air force.

Also contending will be Pfc. David Freeman, Corp. Charles E. Hare, of the army air force, formerly of the British Davis cup team, and Pvt. Tom Falkenburg.

Springfield Plays For Legion Title

MILES CITY, Mont.—(AP)—Heavy hitting teams from Minneapolis and Springfield, O., will meet tonight to decide one of baseball's weightiest issues for 'teenagers—the American Legion Junior championship.

The Richfields, from Minneapolis, slammed into the finals last night with a 9-6 victory over the strong New Orleans Jax. The defeat ousted New Orleans from the double elimination tournament, the Legion's world series.

Springfield, surprise team of the tournament, rested yesterday after having won three out of four games.

Springfield is expected to start its all-around ace, Southpaw Harry Amato, in tonight's game. Amato hurled two wins, and saved another with a fine ninth-inning relief performance.

Kirkwood Renews Hagen Challenge

PHILADELPHIA — (INS) — Joe Kirkwood, Philadelphia pro, today awaits Walter Hagen's reaction to a renewal of his challenge to play a "grudge match" for a side bet of $5,000.

Hagen, with whom Kirkwood had a difference of opinion in Detroit recently as to which is the better golfer, refused the Philadelphian's first challenge and bet $2,000, claiming that Kirkwood is "just a trick shot artist."

Henry A. Hurst, Philadelphia golf enthusiast, has offered to stage the match as a feature of a Red Cross benefit tournament at the Frankford Torresdale Country Club, Oct. 3. Kirkwood wants the loser's half of the money—$2,500—ao go to the Red Cross.

Northwestern's Galaxy of Grid Stars Dwindles Fast

By DAVIS J. WALSH

CHICAGO—(INS)— Coach Lynn Waldorf, ordinarily a most tractable man, nevertheless wishes to announce today that the next clown who walks brightly up and congratulates him on the great football team he may not be going to have at Northwestern university this year is very likely to sustain a swift, unerring kick in the pantry.

As of a few months ago, for instance, it almost seemed like the navy and marines were dropping everything else, in order to ship him, prepaid, some of the better football players of the region.

But, as of now, he doesn't know whether he has a football team, or 11 uniforms and a bottle of horse liniment.

Another thing he doesn't know is whether to call for the quinine or break out the champagne. In fact there are times, becoming increasingly frequent of late, when he dimly wonders why he ever chose this comical, thankless career instead of going in for something substantial and restful, like, say, getting to be a crackerjack bathtub salesman in East New York, N. J.

Anyhow, here's the way Waldorf's situation now stands:

There are a number of stalwart young men on the campus who were transferred from Minnesota, Nebraska and the like—most of them with heft, hustle and big-game experience and gumption.

Exactly 22 of them have been ruled off . . . For the present and perhaps for purposes of the future . . . Because they haven't got passing grades in every subject in the Navy V-12 and marine programs.

"Yeh, 22," Mr. Waldorf agreed, dully, as though just recently hit over the head with a canoe paddle. "Two full teams. Some of them may get passing grades in the exams they're taking now. But others, now eligible, may fail in the single subject which means no liberty—and no football.

"We'll know definitely who's in and who's out by Sept. 7, when the marks are announced. But that'll only be for one month, when another set of examinations will create another list of meltgibles.

"Why, I'm not even counting on Otto Graham, one of our own boys who starred a year ago."

Otto also starred in the recent Brannigan at Dyche Stadium in which a picked college team gave the Washington Redskins their comuppance and, in the ordinary course of events, he might be expected to do a great deal about restoring the dignity of northwestern football, which got a little ruffled last year. The team won only once . . . From Texas, which later beat Georgia Tech in the Cotton Bowl.

GOES TO ARMY

CLEVELAND —(AP)— Pat Seerey, Cleveland Indians reserve outfielder obtained from Wilkes-Barre June 7, will take his military induction physical examination in Little Rock, Ark., Monday, he announced. He recently was reclassified from 4-F to 1-A.

Fishing and Boating Tips

By Verne Jones

The new hunting licenses are in and must be worn by all hunters starting September 1st. There has been some changes in it. It is the same size as before and will fit in your old holders. Better take care of your old holder as there are few available now.

The new license is blue in color. The identification is on the back of the license. Law enforcement officers are stressing the one year residence rule in your requirements to get a license and agents are requested to use extreme caution in determining the residence of applicant. One must have one year of residence in Ohio to apply for resident license. This has always been in effect but is being checked closely because of so many migrant workers in war time.

Also anybody who has been convicted of breaking the Conservation Laws shall have his license revoked and cannot buy another during year of conviction.

I have had many soldiers and sailors ask me whether they should buy a license when they were home on furlough. They said they did not need them where they were stationed. At last Ohio has come through for their boys after almost two years of war.

At the last General Assembly they passed a law which provides that during the year 1943 and 1944 every person on active duty in the military or naval forces, while on leave or furlough shall have the right to fish or hunt without procuring a fishing, hunting or trapping license, provided he has on his person a card or other evidence showing he is a member of the military or naval forces on active duty. This law is now in effect.

We have the new laws and licenses in now. The 25c we get for writing your license goes to the Richland County Fish and Game Association for restocking game right here at home.

Seniors Play Golf Tourney

Annual Event Booked For Thursday and Friday.

OHIO Seniors Golf association members gather at Westbrook Country Club tomorrow for their annual two-day tournament, with Joe Wells, East Liverpool veteran star, defending the championship he won a year ago.

Although entry list for the tournament may be reduced this year because of war work and transportation difficulties, the association is looking forward to a representative tournament.

It is the only major state golf tourney on the books for this year. Meeting to plan the event was delayed this year for a final check-up of transportation problems, and the board of directors, finally decided to go ahead with the joust which should provide members with needed relaxation from the war-speeded pace of their various industries and business.

The tournament is annually scheduled for the Thursday and Friday before Labor Day, and following the usual custom the members will have their annual dinner tomorrow evening with Senator Robert Taft as the principal speaker.

Although the association is principally a social organization of veteran golfers over 50 years of age, competition in the lower age groups is always keen and the championship usually is decided on a score close to the Westbook par.

* * *

Only once in the long history of the tourney has the event been taken away from Mansfield. That one trip was enough. Members decided than to make Westbrook their home course, because of the hospitality shown by the Mansfield club in turning over the entire course to the association for the two days of play.

Pen Inmate To Be Released After Term For Murder of Guard; 3 Executed.

Another chapter was added today to a 10-year old murder case that sent three men to the electric chair and one to the Ohio Penitentiary when Charles Williams was granted a parole from the Ohio Pardon and Parole commission.

Williams was sentenced to 1 to 20 years in the penitentiary when he pleaded guilty to manslaughter during the prosecution of the four Ohio State Reformatory inmates for the murder of Frank B. Hangar, a reformatory guard.

At the time of the trial in 1933 James V. Will, then prosecutor, said he accepted Williams' guilty pleas because there was insufficient evidence to substantiate a first degree murder charge against him. The other three, James Allen, Chester Probaski, and Merrill E. Chandler, were found guilty of first degree murder and died in the electric chair.

Williams was originally sentenced to the reformatory for 10 to 25 years on a charge of highway robbery. He will be released from the pen Dec. 1 to report to Tennessee authorities.

Others granted pardons at the same time were Wynne Cook, also sentenced from Richland county, and John Stroupe, an Ashland countian. Cook, who was sentenced here Sept. 22, 1941 for forgery, will be released Oct. 1 but the Franklin county sheriff will be waiting for him on another charge. Stroupe, sentenced from Ashland county for embezzlement, will be released to Tennessee authorities Dec. 1.

NEW RULES

New visiting rules for the maternity division of Mansfield General hospital were announced today by Dr. A. O. Fonkalsrud, superintendent.

Under the new code set up by the state council of public health, patients in the maternity part of the hospital may have no other visitors than the husband, her parents and the husband's parents.

Enforcement of this new rule will be in effect sometime this month, the exact date to be announced later. Visiting hours for the maternity patients remains the same: 2 to 3 p. m., and 7 to 8 p. m.

Previously a patient in maternity could have friends and other relatives visit them in the afternoon but only the husband in the evening. The new ruling applies to all maternity hospitals throughout the state.

As he began his new job Hildebrand said he was "glad to be back in police work."

"I've always enjoyed this sort of work and I'm glad to be back in the harness again" he said.

WARNS AGAINST SOLICITATION

Red Cross and the Junior Red Cross have not been soliciting for funds this summer, Miss Miriam Hooper, executive secretary of the county chapter, said.

Reports have been made to the office that small children in some neighborhoods have been collecting "money for the Red Cross," but there has been no drive sponsored by the Red Cross.

Miss Hooper said that there will be no solicitation for funds for the Red Cross without an announcement about it.

Stern Legislator Says Drivers Get Permission But No Gas.

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — Rep. Fred A. Hartley, jr., R., N. J., today renewed his demands that the office of Price Administration nullify gasoline rations between the east and the midwest.

PLAN LABOR DAY BAND CONCERT

Labor Organizations Decide on Brief War-Time Program For Monday.

Too busy with war production to take much time out to celebrate Labor day, Mansfield's labor organizations will stage a war-time program Monday night at North Lake park to mark the holiday observance.

A concert by the Westinghouse Local 711 band under the direction of Frank Deckrell and brief talks on the significance of Labor day by Mansfield speakers will highlight the program, scheduled to start at 8 p. m.

Following the concert and talks, a movie will be shown. It will be a city-wide celebration and the movie will be free, said Mike Filipeli, secretary of the Richland county industrial union council.

Plans for the program are under the direction of the CIO and AFL council which joined in sponsoring the program after the city's civilian defense units decided not to stage a program at Stadium field.

Labor leaders said production will be be kept moving in the city's war plants to hurry the end of the war and workmen won't have time to prepare for the usual Labor day parade through the downtown district.

STILL WAITING

Shipment of New B Gas Books Fails To Arrive Here.

Richland county ration board officials today were still awaiting the arrival of the new-style B gasoline coupons from the district office in Cleveland, C. C. Beelman, chairman, said.

The supply of B books was exhausted early yesterday morning, and the board was unable to obtain a new supply of books immediately. Word was received yesterday that a new supply had been placed in the mail at Cleveland Monday night, but they had not been received yet this morning.

The old-type supplemental gasoline coupons were unacceptable for gasoline after midnight yesterday. Motorists who have mailed their B books to the board for exchange will have to use their basic A coupons until the new books arrive.

ATTY. EBERLY TO HEAD DEMS AS CHAIRMAN

Replaces Cave as Head of Executive Committee; Other Vacancies Filled.

Atty. James L. Eberly, Mansfield, last night was chosen chairman of the Richland County Democratic executive committee to succeed Frank Cave, giving the younger members of the party control of both the central and executive committees. Eberly was the only one considered for the chairmanship.

At the same time the committee elected Miss Mary Newcomer secretary-treasurer of the executive group to replace John F. Correll who is employed in Washington, D. C.

Appoximately 50 members of the county committee attended the meeting at the courthouse to fill the two offices and name a successor to Correll as a member of the committee. Chosen for the post was Herschel Roberts, East Mansfield.

Cave, former speaker of the Ohio house of representatives, had served as chairman of the committee only six months when he resigned to become acting Mansfield postmaster. He is a candidate for permanent appointment as postmaster.

Eberly, a graduate of the University of Michigan, is one of the city's younger attorneys. He is associated in law practice with Glenn L. Marriott.

The committee last night gave its unanimous endorsement to the appointment of P. S. Carroll as county commissioner. The endorsement, however, came several hours after Carroll's appointment yesterday noon to succeed Ray Hout who died recently.

RECEIVES 'STAR'

Formal Presentation Made To Lieut. Chatlain.

Formal award of the Silver Star was made yesterday to Lieut. Dean F. Chatlain, 24, son of Mr. and Mrs. Byron Chatlain, 335 Cedar street, a tank platoon commander wounded in the Tunisian campaign, who is convalescing in Percy Jones hospital at Battle Creek, Mich.

The presentation was made by Brig. Gen. Joseph Bastion, commanding officer of the hospital.

Chatlain was wounded Feb. 1 in the drive on Sfax when a German 88 millimeter incendiary shell hit his tank killing five of the crew. He later amputated his own foot with his pocket knife after directing his gunner to safety.

Blames Spread of Whooping Cough on Failure to Report

Failure to make a prompt report of contagious diseases to the health department was blamed today by Dr. W. B. Wild, city-county health commissioner, for the spread of whooping cough in Mansfield, resulting in what he described as a "baby epidemic."

He said 21 cases of the malady have been reported to his department, not enough to cause alarm but more than the normal number at this time of the year. Most of the cases are in Mansfield.

Dr. Wild said some of the cases were not reported and did not receive medical care until there had been time to spread the disease to other children, in the community. He said parents of some of the child victims apparently thought they could escape quarantine by failing to call a physician or report to the health department.

"It's clearly the obligation of the family physician and the parents to see that our department gets a report of whooping cough or any other contagious disease so quarantines can be placed on the homes," the health commissioner said.

HOPKINS PREDICTS WAR WILL LAST AT LEAST 2 YEARS MORE

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Harry L. Hopkins, President Roosevelt's closest adviser, predicted today that the war will last two more years "at least" and enigmatically added that "if we lose Russia" the conflict will drag out five years or longer.

Writing in the October issue of the American magazine, Hopkins said the Axis "still holds the military championship of the world" and still is an undefeated enemy, with industry still functioning and with submarine and airplane production "not yet dimished much . . ."

He warned that we should not assume that China "can fight forever" and said, that "Russia, the keystone of the war, is still fighting grimly."

"If we lose her (Russia)," Hopkins said without further elaboration, "I do not believe for a moment that we will lose the war, but I would change my prediction about the time of victory. Then, indeed, we would have a long war ahead of us."

In a cold analysis of Axis strength he said that despite the Allied bombing offensive of Axis Europe "the Axis has more producing plants than when the war began."

Hopkins estimated that Nazi war production however, is perhaps down by well over 10 per cent because of raids and other causes, although "She has yet to face the full power of bombing. That will be devastating but it will take time. . ."

CARROLL TAKES OATH OF OFFICE

Assumes Duties as Richland County Commissioner After Appointment By Board.

P. S. Carroll, appointed Richland county commissioner, yesterday was administered the oath of office this morning by Probate Judge Stuart H. Cramer and assumed his new duties. He takes the place of Commissioner Ray Hout who died last week.

Clerk of the county board of commissioners for the past 10 years, Carroll will continue in that capacity in addition to his duties as commissioner. He will draw the commissioner salary of $2,820 yearly.

This decision was made by the commissioners in view of the fact that the board's work has not been heavy since the advent of the war.

Commissioner Guy Stewart said several applications for the position of clerk had already been filed.

Carroll, who lives at 77 West Second street, was the unanimous choice of the board of three charged with filling the vacancy, County Auditor Norman L. Wolfe, a member of the committee revealed. His was the first name considered, out of a field of nearly 20 applicants for the job Wolfe said, and the decision to name Carroll, a Democrat, was quickly reached. Other members of the committee were Recorder Don Orewiler and Judge Cramer.

In accepting the appointment, Carroll said he would fill out the unexpired term of Mr. Hout, which ends in 1944, but would not be a candidate for election to succeed himself.

2 MORE ESCAPE

Reformatory Inmates Flee Institution Farm,

A state-wide search was on today for two Mansfield reformatory inmates who fled from the institution's farm shortly after noon yesterday. Six inmates have escaped from the institution within the past 10 days, but two of them were captured Monday in Chillicothe.

Escaping yesterday were Keith Flattley, 18, admitted last March 8 from Greene county for breaking and entering, and Jack Phoden, 19, sentenced last March from Hamilton county for burglary. Both were serving one-to-15-year sentences.

The youths were trusties on the farm and apparently fled through a corn field. Guards searched the area around the reformatory during the afternoon and broadcast a description of the pair but had no trace of them today.

TAXI 'MERGER' PROGRAM FAILS

Mansfield Companies Decide To 'Take Chances' With ODT Regulations.

Failing for the second time yesterday in an attempt to "merge" Mansfield's five taxi firms into a unified supervision center, proprietors of the companies had decided today to continue operation under the present plan and take their chances with the Office of Defense Transportation regulations.

The operators conferred all of yesterday afternoon with two ODT representatives from Canton at the city building without getting any nearer the solution to their problem than they were before, it was said.

"We just couldn't get together on a merger plan," said George Reichert, proprietor of the Service Taxi company who has been chairman of the two meetings here. Reichert said no one operator was to blame for the failure to agree, adding that the owners felt they wanted to continue in charge of their own firms.

Under the merger idea proposed by the ODT, the five companies would operate from a central office but each owner would continue to receive the profits from his cars and hire his drivers. Centralization would make it possible to eliminate some of the useless trips over the city, and to haul more passengers with less wear on cars and tires, it was pointed out.

The ODT representatives told the taxi men yesterday that stiffer regulations regarding mileage and repair parts for cars may be imposed at any time, possibly forcing some of the firms to take some of their cars out of operation or at least curtail their use sharply.

STOCK MARKET RESUMES PATH TO RECOVERY

Exchange Turnover For Past Month Drops Far Below Figures For July.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The stock market resumed its uptrend today although here and there some prominent issues failed to attract support.

Ahead in moderately active early dealings were Chrysler, General Electric, Loew's, U. S. Steel, Westinghouse, Texas Co., and Great Northern, preferred. General Motors and Western Union slipped a bit.

Of interest in brokerage circles was the stock exchange's monthly report showing August turnover was 14,251,976 shares compared with 26,324,332 in July. Only in the first two trading days of the month did activity exceed 1,000,000 shares.

The film, based on the famed Broadway hit of a few seasons ago, has many hit tunes, including Cole Porter's "Do I Love You?". Red plays a dim-witted hat-check boy who is in love with the night club entertainer, played by Lucille Ball. When Red wins the sweepstakes she agrees to marry him for his money. Celebrating their engagement Red accidentally drinks a mickey and dreams he's Louis XV.

New Thriller.

Beginning today at the Madison is "Captive Wild Woman," a new thriller created by the makers of "Frankenstein," "Wolf Man" and "Dracula." It reveals the secret crimes of a brilliant but fiendish doctor-scientist. Through a fantastic surgical feat he transforms an orang-outang into a beautiful and attractive girl. Leads are taken by John Carradine and Evelyn Akers. Co-feature is "Calaboose," featuring Jimmy Rogers, Noah Beery, jr., and Mary Brian.

Davies Account.

"Mission to Moscow," based on the book by the former ambassador to Russia, Joseph E. Davis, is showing at the Ritz. The story, starring Walter Huston and Ann Harding, is an actual account of the momentous events preceding this second World war. There is also a love story running through the picture. It is the real life romance of Emlen Knight Davies and Robert Grosjean, the young Belgian engineer whom the ambassador's daughter met in Moscow and married in 1939. Co-feature is "On Dress Parade," starring the Dead End Kids.

WAR BIRTHDAY RAID SHATTERS BERLIN AGAIN

British Bombers Pour Flame and Steel on Nazi City For 45 Minutes.

newly reorganized anti-aircraft defenses.

The German air force struck back at England on a comparatively small scale. A few Nazi planes were reported to have swept over the east coast of England during the night, dropping bombs which caused only slight damage.

The RAF raid on Berlin, followed a day of intense aerial activity which saw a large force of American Flying Fortresses attack the Amiens-Clissy airport, one of the largest Nazi fighter-plane bases in France, with good results. American medium bombers struck at the Vendeville airport at Lille and at the Mazingarbe chemical works near Bethune in France.

Other daylight activities included a raid by RAF Mitchells and Typhoons on the Nazi airport at St. Pol, France.

Nazis Report 47 Attackers Downed

BERLIN—(By official German wireless) — (INS) — A German communique today claimed 47 bombers were shot down during last night's RAF raid on Berlin "according to reports so far available."

Damage "in some districts of the city and in the vicinity of the capital," was acknowledged, "some of it considerable." The population suffered only slight casualties, the communique said.

The announcement dismissed fighting on the Russian front with the assertion that Soviet attacks in the Mius river, Kharkov, Sevsk and Vyazma sectors were repulsed, "some of them in hand-to-hand fighting." "Our own counter-attacks were successful," the communique asserted.

Step-Up Attacks On Italy Mainland

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA—(AP)—Pressing the aerial offensive against Italy with ever greater vigor, American Flying Fortresses yesterday made a 1,000-mile round trip from northwest African bases to pound railway lines, airfields and an aircraft factory at Pisa.

Medium bombers meanwhile delivered strong blows at railway communications at Salerno, Cosenza and Catanzaro in southern Italy.

At the same time American Liberators from the Middle East pounded enemy rail installations at Pescara on the eastern coast of Italy.

The four-engined bombers scored direct hits on the railway station and a railroad bridge and shot down 10 enemy fighters. One Liberator was reported missing.

Two British battleships joined in the daylight offensive against the Italian mainland. Their 16-inch guns poured a heavy bombardment into enemy coastal batteries in the area of Reggio Calabria on the Italian toe.

The same battleships, with a cruiser and several destroyers, engaged batteries in the area of Cape Pellaro, also on the Strait of Messina.

Pisa, almost 200 miles north of Rome, is an important rail junction where the east-west line to Florence splits off from the coast line running between Genoa and Rome.

The famous leaning tower, the cathedral and other historic monuments at Pisa were spared by the great formations of Fortresses which went for the rail yards, tracks and other military objectives.

Reveals Allies Roaming Calabria

LONDON—(INS)—The German radio, in a broadcast heard by Reuter's news agency, said today that a hundred Allied troops were "roaming the Calabrian mountains" at the southern tip of Italy.

Yesterday Berlin asserted that an Allied landing attempt in this area last Sunday by 400 troops had been repulsed.

There has been no official confirmation of either of these reports in any responsible Allied source.

Italians Left With 'Empty Feeling'

NEW YORK—(INS)—Betraying rising Italian fears of Allied invasion, the Rome radio today complained that British Prime Minister Winston Churchill's Quebec speech "left us with an empty feeling" — presumably in the stomach.

As quoted by NBC, the announcer said: "We were all steamed up by prophecies that he would give the signal for invasion. Yet hours later nothing has happened.

"He didn't even insult us this time!"

TAKES MORE TIME

SALT LAKE CITY —(AP)— The time required to wait on the average food customer has increased from three minutes to 15, A. Rex Johnson, chief of the Food Distribution Administration's retail division reported today. He said inexperienced employes, ration stamps and shortages of merchandise are responsible.

FIVE KILLED AS FORTRESS FALLS

Big Plane Crashes Near Lockbourne Air Base.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— The crew of five, four officers and an enlisted man, were killed early today in the crash of a Flying Fortress on a farm one mile south of the Lockbourne army air force base, the public relations office announced.

The crash occurred at 1:58 a. m. Officers said the Fortress had been on a routine training flight.

The plane caught fire and was almost destroyed by flames. One of the victims remained unidentified hours after the crash. Names of the other victims were withheld pending notification of the next of kin.

RUSSIANS SEND NAZIS REELING

Threaten Smolensk as Germans Fall Back Along Entire 700-Mile Front.

more than 200 trucks were destroyed. Many prisoners and much booty were captured. Red Air Force planes, actively supporting the offensive, shot down 37 German aircraft.

The capture of Yelnya also outflanked Bryansk, 100 miles to the southeast and already under direct assault from the east and southeast.

Farther south, in the second of the two offensives disclosed yesterday, the Russians pushed deeper into the northern Ukraine against weakening resistance after capturing more than 200 towns and villages in an initial breakthrough of 37 miles on a 62-mile-wide front.

Most important conquests were Rylsk, 39 miles south of Sevsk, and Glukov, to the west and 15 miles from the Bryansk-Konotop railroad. Units southwest of Sevsk were credited with killing 3,000 Germans and wrecking 28 tanks and seven self-propelled guns yesterday.

Eight tanks were captured intact southwest of Sevsk, as well as 26 field guns and four self-propelled guns.

New advances also were reported west and southwest of Kharkov, while Red armies along the Sea of Azov killed 3,000 more Germans in the process of liquidating the Axis forces caught in a Russian encirclement maneuver.

FDR, CHURCHILL TO REJOIN SOON

How To Get Russia Into Allied Councils Expected To Be Big Point of Talks.

going along pretty well with respect to a three-power conference.

Then, too, one of Churchill's close associates, Brendan Bracken, British minister of information, declared that while in his opinion the war against Germany certainly would continue into next year, "postwar problems must be discussed because obviously you never know when the war is going to end."

Bracken, at a press conference here last night, classed as security information the time of Churchill's arrival, but in line with disclosures at Quebec last week it was expected in the immediate future.

Churchill laid considerable emphasis in his speech on the unrest in Europe, and it was noted in informed quarters here that this is the sort of violence designed to pave the way for invading forces, whether they strike Europe in the Balkans, Norway or France.

"All of the Balkans is aflame," the prime minister said at one point in his broadcast. At another he declared: "Certainly we see all Europe rising under Hitler's tyranny x x x. What is now happening in Denmark is only another example."

To Russia the British leader held forth three different methods of meeting with officials of the United States and Great Britain:

1. A three-way conference among Stalin, Roosevelt and himself.

2. A meeting among the British, American and Russian foreign ministers or their representatives.

3. Participation by Russian representatives in "the political decisions which arise out of the victories Anglo-American forces have gained in the Mediterranean."

CAN RIDE IF HE HOLDS TWIN

Service Man Offered Air Trip to Florida By Mother.

CLEVELAND —(AP)— A free airplane trip to Florida waits the serviceman who can convince Mrs. R. W. Witty he "needs the trip most," and can hold one of the Witty twins on his lap for the 11-hour journey.

Mrs. Witty, a Cleveland woman whose husband is an air forces major at Lakeland Base, Fla., plans to fly to Orlando, Fla., Saturday with her 18-month-old twin sons.

Her own ticket entitles her to passage for one of the children and she offered to buy a second ticket for any serviceman traveling to Orlando, provided he holds her other child.

RICHLAND CORN CROP TO BE RECORD ONE OR BIG FAILURE

The weatherman is going to have a great deal to say within the next month about Richland county's corn crop, and it's the opinion of County Agent George B. Ganyard that the crop can be one of the biggest in years or a dismal failure.

It all hinges on how early the first killing frost wilts the leaves and stops the corn growth. If frost holds off until after Oct. 1, the county agent believes the year's crop will be nearly as big as the 1942 yield which was the highest in years.

Corn has made a marked recovery after a slow start, and a normal fall season would permit it to mature. An early killing frost would virtually ruin all but the earliest corn, the county agent pointed out.

Weather records over the past 32 years show that the first killing frost in the Mansfield area usually comes about Oct. 5. The earliest that has been recorded during that period was on Sept. 14.

The county's corn is late this year because of the cold, wet spring which delayed planting, but most farmers planted hybrid varieties which mature earlier without turning brown, Ganyard said.

"The corn is riper than it looks, because hybrids stay green longer after the ears have matured," he said.

Ideal growing weather since June 1 has given the county's corn fields a healthy dark green color and the stalks have developed large ears. Few of the fields, however, are showing any trace of brown to indicate harvest is near.

Richland county's average corn yield has been slightly under 50 bushels per acre in recent years, but that figure has been stepped up some by the use of hybrid seed, the county agent explained.

U. S. CARRIER FORCE ATTACKS MARCUS ISLAND

Navy Says Raid Presumed To Be In Progres After Tokyo Reveals Thrust.

international date line and Sept. 1 there was Aug. 31 in Washington. Thus the navy statement that the attack presumably continues meant that American warships were operating in waters the enemy herctofore has dominated long after their presence became known.

Marcus island is 1,200 southeast of Tokyo and 900 miles northwest of Wake island on a line with Tokyo.

The action is the first against this enemy held outpost guarding vital Japanese positions in the central Pacific since March 4, 1942.

There was no indication in either the Tokyo statements or the navy disclosures here to show whether the action was limited to Marcus island or whether American forces had struck simultaneously at other points.

The Japanese obviously were badly worried, however, the Tokyo radio pointing out that a force which succeeded in raiding Marcus might have struck at Japan itself.

The American naval spokesman said:

"A carrier task force raid planned for Sept. 1 is presumably in progress at Marcus island. The United States task force should have arrived on scheduled time. However, no report has been received from the raiding force and it is presumed that there will be none until need for radio silence ceases to exist."

Not in 20 months of this war has the navy issued a statement reporting a raid while it still was in progress. The announcement today indicated complete confidence of the high command here that the task force was so powerful as to be able to cope with any forces the Japanese might attempt to throw against it.

There was about the announcement a suggestion of war nerves planning with the navy possibly deliberately attempting to confront the Tokyo admirals with so direct a challenge that they would be compelled sooner or later to throw their main fleet into action.

Marcus, so far as could be learned here, is not one of the main Japanese bases such as Truk island further to the south, but it is an important defensive position and listening post guarding the southeastern approaches to the Tokyo-Yokohama area, heart of Japan.

When an American task force raided Marcus on March 4, 1942, under the leadership of Admiral William F. Halsey, now the American fleet commander in the south Pacific, no enemy aircraft or ships were present but heavy anti-aircraft fire was encountered.

The American planes dropped 96 bombs on the small island, damaging hangars, fuel and ammunition dumps, radio installations and aircraft runways. The American force lost only one aircraft.

It Won't Be Long, Says Patterson

MELBOURNE — (U.P.) — U. S. Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson said today that "You won't have to wait long for the bombing of Japan."

Patterson had been asked at an interview whether he thought the Allied conquest of the Aleutians had brought the bombing of Japan nearer.

He praised the "spirit" of Allied troops in the south Pacific and said they were receiving war materials in sufficient quantities to increase pressure on the enemy.

Patterson and Lieut. Gen. William S. Knudsen, war department production director, talked with Prime Minister John Curtin for two hours on undisclosed matters.

Jap Air Fleets Driven From Wewak

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Southwest Pacific —(U.P.)— A decisive Allied triumph has forced Japanese aerial fleets to shift their base to Dutch New Guinea, leaving nearly 400 wrecked planes behind and laying open their advanced coast bases to unhampered assault, it was revealed today.

The victory was announced in a communique reporting that a strong Liberator force Monday destroyed between 20 and 25 more planes in the Wewak area of New Guinea to which the enemy had brought reinforcements from the East Indies, the Philippines and Formosa.

Ceaseless air blows that started on Aug. 17 forced the Japanese to withdraw their planes to safer fields as far back as Hollandia, Dutch New Guinea, 200 miles west of Wewak and nearly 600 miles from Salamaua, threatened by Allied ground forces.

The enemy's air power in New Guinea is "dangerously removed from ground garrisons which this force is designed to support," it was announced. The garrisons included those at Salamaua, Lae, Medang and Wewak, besides smaller bases along the northeast coast.

Tokyo Sends Naval Chiefs on Sea Duties

NEW YORK—(AP)—The Tokyo radio said today that the chief-of-staff of the China sea fleet and the chief-of-staff and chief-of-personnel at the Yokosuka naval base have been "transferred" to "important sea duties."

The changes in command, as announced by Tokyo, make Vice Admiral Kanji Ugaki chief of staff of the China sea fleet. The broadcast did not name his predecessor.

Rear Admiral Katsuzo Akiyama was named as the new Yokosuka personnel chief, succeeding Rear Admiral Masatsugo Hoshino, and Rear Admiral Tadayuki Matsunaga as chief of staff, succeeding Vice Admiral Minor Karui.

PROMPT PEACE, PLEA OF POPE

Pontiff Says World's People Clamoring For End To War Operations.

be able to maintain power unless it publicly and emphatically makes plain to the Italian people that all possible now is being done to get Italy out of the war.

Early in his speech the pope emphasized that his love for humanity was prompting his words, and they were not designed to damage anyone but to aid everyone.

"To continue the war is to conform to national interest as against human and Christian conscience. Give to all nations the hope of honorable peace by arranging just peace.

"Blessed are those, no matter of which belligerents, who are trying to solve the present situation."

Those latter words were taken as an indication that some actual, specific peace move might be under way, possibly by Italy, although there was no indication of how far advanced it might be or of its prospects for success.

The pontiff's excoriation of "those who are building their power on oppression" appeared to be a plain admonition aimed at the Hitler regime.

His declaration was expected to affect the Catholic populace of Germany, Hungary and elsewhere in Axis Europe, as well as that of Italy.

It also was expected to reinforce the moves by Spain toward a position of absolute neutrality, as against non-belligerence on the side of the Axis.

Referring to his appeal for peace in August, 1939, just before the war began, the pope said that "events happening today are proving our words."

"Justice and love are inspiring us to address our words to everybody for everybody's welfare," he said.

"War operations are reaching a climax; everywhere people are looking at ruins. In all nations hatred against total war is increasing."

The pope asserted that "trust between nations has been swept away."

"We are addressing ourselves to those who can bring justice to all and we tell them that the truly strong need not fear being too generous," he added.

gathering were brief—"I am happy to hear the Danish language still spoken in my country. Continue with that." They were significant, however, for the Danes, who apparently interpreted them as an approval of their stout-hearted resistance against overwhelming odds.

Hannecken, having crushed Denmark's brief military revolt, ruthlessly carried out against any small assemblies of Danes his threat to disperse groups without consideration of human lives.

German troops kept up continuous patrols in Copenhagen and other large cities in armored cars.

The dictator's iron-hand methods restored at least surface calm to much of Denmark.

Details on conditions inside Denmark came from eyewitnesses who were brought to Sweden in a Danish minesweeper.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1943.

The English language is spoken by 270 million persons—or at least some parts of it.

It's September now, you know—have you looked after that little matter of having the heating equipment inspected and filling the coal bin?

It now appears that people will have to be satisfied with being told when the invasion took place, rather than having the time and place announced in advance.

Second Front Awaits Readiness

LACK of complete readiness of Great Britain and the United States to start a land invasion of western Europe, and thus establish what Russia would consider an actual "second front", seems apparent from the tone of Prime Minister Churchill's address in Quebec yesterday afternoon.

Churchill's high tribute to the fighting power of Russia, without which, he said, "the terrific aerial attack against Germany would not have been possible", included admission that he did not blame Russia for any criticism it has levelled at its allies for not having opened a second front on the continent.

It was in this connection that Mr. Churchill indicated invasion of western Europe will come only "when there is every chance of military success, unswayed by political considerations."

Emphasis in the Churchill talk was given to the desirability of a United Nations conference at which Russia would be represented, so as to provide "a unit of decision between the three great opponents of Hitlerite tyranny." Explanation was repeated that it would have been inappropriate for Russia to have been represented at the Quebec conference, which was mainly concerned with "heating and inflaming the war against Japan," with which country the Soviet government has a five-year treaty of non-aggression.

While the prime minister's talk radiated complete confidence in ultimate victory, he described speculation on when the war will end, as "vain and unprofitable"—which conforms to views of all observers whose judgment can be trusted.

Time required to win the war will depend more largely on what people in the United States do in the future, in providing war materials, supplies and food, than on what has been done thus far—and investing in war bonds will be a necessary part of individual participation.

Discriminatory Margarine Tax

SCARCITY of butter, and the government subsidy of five cents a pound to keep the price lower than it would otherwise be, serve to revive the subject of discriminatory taxes on margarine, which is quite generally recognized as a satisfactory substitute for butter in many of its uses.

While the ration point requirement in buying margarine is only four per pound, as against ten red points demanded with purchase of a pound of butter, the prohibitive tax of 10 cents a pound on colored margarine results in only the white article being sold, with a capsule of harmless yellow coloring provided for home use.

Discriminatory taxes on the manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers of margarine are obviously designed to restrict competition of this commodity with butter and it is interesting to note that eleven northwestern states have their own prohibitive taxes which prevent sale of margarine in those states.

Margarine should, of course, be plainly labeled as such, but a tax of 10 cents a pound on the colored product is entirely without present justification.

'Stay-at-Home' Holiday Coming

NEXT Monday's observance of Labor day will take the form of a "stay-at-home" holiday for many people who had been accustomed to make this the occasion for a three-day trip of some sort.

Because of gasoline shortage and crowding of plane, train and bus transportation systems, emphasis is being placed on the necessity for avoiding unnecessary travel during this holiday period.

It is pointed out that anyone making a trip in a public conveyance for no better reason than to enjoy a holiday outing is contributing toward breakdown of the country's transportation systems.

Aside from other considerations, there is much war work to be done, and it should be kept in mind that there are no holidays for men on the battle fronts.

South Africa Supports Allies

ONE COUNTRY where the people approve of the war and its management is South Africa. This has just been proved by the elections.

Ever since the war began, General Smuts, former Boer leader in the war against England 40 years ago, and in the last war a member of the British Imperial War Council, has been prime minister, carrying out a full-war policy. Against the war has been the Reunited Nationalist party, led by Dr. D. F. Malan. Playing Boer against Briton, this party had nearly as many votes as Smuts in the outgoing parliament. Grievances that pile up against any government in war time were thought to give Malan a good chance.

Instead, thanks in large part of the soldier vote, Smuts will have 107 supporters in the next parliament out of 150. This ensures not only support for the war, but for Smuts' well-known belief in international co-operation afterwards.

Salerno's Place In History

SALERNO, bombarded by the United Nations, made the headlines for the first time in its history. This is not to say that this ancient Italian city is now famous for the first time, because once it was among the best-known towns in Europe. But that was before the day of headlines and even newspapers.

Salerno was the seat of the first European university, and of a school of medicine whose pupils went out all over Europe. A popular book on health, "The Rule of the School of Salerno," was read and followed for centuries. Now Salerno figures only as a minor town ruled by Fascists.

Another seasonal problem will be how to dispose of fallen leaves, now that there's no WPA to gather them up.

Of course it will be up to the Allies to clean up the mess in Messina.

Counter-Attack In Russia Will Be Test for Nazi War Machine

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

NEVER since Hitler broke his pledged word and attacked Russia has the position of his armies on the eastern front been so precarious as it has become with the loss of his right wing anchor—Taganrog, on the Sea of Azov.

That right wing is now like a pennant on a flag-pole, its fluttering loose end subject to the winds that sweep across it. Of course, that's a very unmilitary and exaggerated figure of speech, but it will have served its purpose if it emphasizes the danger of the Nazi position.

Having taken this major stronghold, which is one of the vital parts of the gateway to the oil fields of the Caucasus, the Red army is now reported crushing its way steadily westward along the coast of the Sea of Azov.

Small wonder that Marshal Stalin ordered a 124-gun salute in Moscow in honor of the Red army, while all Russia exulted in the prowess of their men at arms.

The fall of Taganrog was effected by the application of a pair of great pincers to the Hun line. The Reds thrust fiercely into the German defenses forty miles above Taganrog and started a turning movement southward towards that port. Meantime, another Russian force was smashing directly at the Nazi anchor from the east. The Hitlerites had to run or be surrounded.

Similar turning movements are being driven into the German line as far north as the Kharkov area, and some 800,000 Nazi troops are in danger of encirclement.

Thus Hitler's whole southern wing is being forced back, as has been forecast so many times in this column in recent weeks. Having been torn loose from his Taganrog anchor, the fuehrer now is faced with two nasty alternatives:

1 HE MUST stage a heavy counter-attack in the Donets basin to the north of Taganrog and fling the Reds back, thus restoring his previous positions.

2 FAILING in this, he must continue his withdrawal until his whole vast front from the Sea of Azov northward to Leningrad, a distance of more than a thousand miles, has been pulled back under fierce Russian attack to the line of the great Dnieper river.

If the Germans have the strength they may be expected to counterattack. I was chatting on this point with my colleague, General H. S. Sewell, the distinguished British military expert, and he remarked that "heavy counter-attacks must be expected in the Donets, and failure in this respect may well be regarded as a sign of Nazi weakness."

That seems to sum the matter up neatly. If the invaders don't counter-attack, or if they make the attempt and fail, it will be significant as showing that the German war machine has lost a tremendous amount of that awful striking power which long terrified the world.

SHOULD the Germans be forced to retire to the line of the Dnieper, one would expect them to make a back-to-the-wall stand to hold the Crimea. If you will refer to your maps (don't tell me that you haven't got them out) you will see that the Dnieper bulges out to the east, just north of the Crimea. You will note, too, that there's a railway which touches the point of this bulge by Zaporozhe and runs south through Melitopol into the Crimea.

It's logical to expect the Germans to try to hold along that railway, if they get pushed back that far.

Should they be unable to maintain this position they would lose the Crimea, and the Black sea once more would be opened up in the north to the Russians — a grand windfall for the Reds.

Meanwhile Herr Hitler has all but lost his last toe-hold on the rich Donets basin, with its coal and far-reaching wheat fields.

To complete the picture we should recognize that the fall rains are near in Russia, and their arrival will slow the Russian operations. As a matter of fact one would think the Reds must be about due for a breather after their sensational exertions.

Looking Back

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Saturday, Sept. 1, 1923.

Terrific earthquake shook Japan and damage to Tokyo and other cities was described as "appalling." An immediate appeal for aid was made to the United States.

City council decided to present $125,000 bond issue to voters, to carry through street improvement program.

Transfer companies were kept busy as this was "moving day" for many Mansfield families.

Russell C. Terman returned to Mansfield after having been in China for a year.

Son was born to Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Dingler, 213 Sturges avenue.

Harry Salter, 76, pioneer Mansfield wagon maker and blacksmith, died.

Frank Cave reported to police that his auto had been stolen from parking place on East Fourth street.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Twenty years ago today, Sept. 1, 1923, earthquakes, followed by tidal waves and by fires, killed more than 100,000 persons in Japan. Tokyo was almost obliterated. Yokohama, a dozen other towns, were made shambles. The nation which stood firmest as a friend—which poured out its aid to the stricken Japanese the quickest, was the United States.

Dave Boone Says:

JOE STALIN may have Germany licked before the other partners get into high. Those Russians are slamming the super race all over the lot, and it's a big lot.

The Nazis are so groggy the best they can do is to beat Joe to the announcement that they've been jolted again. Every defeat for Adolf is broadcast as all according to Hitler's plans. But no other paperhanger ever made a specialty of claiming even the fall of his ladder represented progress in papering the room.

There's terrific eyebrow raising in New York over the district attorney's allegation that a judge won a nomination for a high court through the accepted aid of a notorious racketeer. But I can't join in the look of surprise over the charge that political leaders, civic biggies and candidates for office don't exactly shrink from contact with the bad boys.

* * *

Any observer of the American scene knows that too many of our lily-white leaders shamelessly show more than a tolerant attitude toward the racket boys and welcome their help instead of treating them with disgust and contempt.

* * *

If you want to meet the really top-flight gangsters at the race track, ball parks or big political banquets the thing to do is to get a politician to introduce you. I don't mind an example being made of somebody, but I wish it could be the really big fellows and not the small fry.

Timely Editorial

A More Refined Name.

It apears to be taken for granted in Washington that the only way out of the high cost of living blind-alley in which the country has landed is to subsidize it with the people's money. That is the real meaning of all plans for paying the farmer enough out of public funds to keep him happy, instead of letting him collect directly from consumers, who thereupon would become unhappy and insist on getting wage boosts even faster than they have been getting them up to now.

It is of interest, therefore, that War Food Administrator Marvin Jones has found a way to speak of subsidies without using the word, which has a bad taste for Americans. They are to be known henceforth in the language of persuasion as "price support." The idea no longer is to subsidize inflated farm prices but to support them. It is simple, understandable, clear, convincing and perhaps it is even justifiable. But it is still subsidies.—Canton Repository.

Anti-Willkieite Announces As Candidate for GOP Nomination

WASHINGTON—A new Republican candidate for president of the United States has bobbed up in the midwest recently. He is Wheeler McMillen, editor of the Farm Journal, owned by Pennsylvania's monied political boss Joe Pew.

Mr. McMillen has been making the rounds of Indiana, Nebraska, Iowa and the corn belt. His reception has been one of surprised speculation. Since Mr. McMillen obviously has no chance of getting anywhere, it is presumed that GOP's anti-Willkie Joe Pew sent him out as a decoy to attract farm votes away from Willkie and generally to confuse the issue.

However, one interesting thing turned up about Mr. McMillen in Indiana. He is the president of the Chemurgic Council, which aims to promote the use of agricultural products in industry.

However, when Senator Gillette of Iowa led a brilliant crusade for the use of alcohol from grain in making synthetic rubber, McMillen strangely enough took a strong position that rubber should be made exclusively from petroleum, not from grain products. (McMillen's boss Joe Pew of Sun Oil is one of the biggest oil men in the country and is operating an oil synthetic plant for the government.)

So when McMillen put himself in the position of working against the use of farm products in industry, outraged Hassel Schenck, head of the Farm Bureau in Indiana, called for his resignation as president of the Chemurgic Council. This bobbed up to haunt Mr. McMillen on his tour through Indiana recently.

Newsprint Extravaganza.

WHILE President Roosevelt and Prime Ministers Churchill and Mackenzie King were cementing friendship of the British Empire and the United States in Ottawa, an announcement was made in Windsor, Ontario, that made many U. S. publishers broiling mad, especially in Detroit.

The Windsor Star, published directly across the river from Detroit, announced that on Sept. 3 it would issue a 180 page special anniversary edition, including a 64-page rotogravure section.

Like most newspapers throughout the country, the Detroit papers have had to cut down their editorial content to get within the strict WPB limits on newsprint. They have had to cancel hundreds of thousands of dollars in advertising contracts and to limit even the size of want ads.

Canadian newspapers apparently have not felt the pinch. It is fine to unite the sentiments of the United States, Canada and England, some observers feel, but this is no time to flaunt peacetime anniversary editions in the face of the U. S. press when the wartime shortage is supposedly so acute.

Tire Plant for Russia.

FEW PEOPLE are aware of the fact that one of our biggest tire plants, with a capacity of 20,000 tires a day, has been litteraly lifted from its Henry Ford foundations in Dearborn, Mich., and sent to the Soviets.

It is probably the greatest lend-lease operation on record. The plan was to have the Red army ride to victory on tires made by U. S. machinery.

This operation was carried through despite the opposition of Rubber Administrator Big Bill Jeffers, who found after he first came to Washington that the deal already had been made. He declared, however, that our own synthetic rubber program would require all the tire manufacturing capacity the country has ever had—and more—and that a whole plant should not be carried off to another country.

Lend-Lease argued that the U. S. rubber shortage made the Ford plant idle, but Jeffers countered that it would not be idle long, in view of the new production of synthetic rubber.

Jeffers even carried the question directly to the president. But FDR told him that a commitment had been made, and a protocol (treaty) been drawn up with Russia by which the tire plant was promised in writing.

So the rubber director shrugged his shoulders. He now learns that it required six months to dismantle the plant and ship it to the seaboard. It was sent from Pacific Coast ports to Vladivostok, then across the Siberian wastes to Russia, where its location is a military secret. So far as can be learned here, the factory is not yet in operation.

If the Russians can make it run, it will be used to produce about 10,000 heavy-duty military tires a day. The U. S. production of 20,000 was in terms of passenger car tires.

In addition to the tire factory, we have now shipped 2,000,000 tires to Russia, and another 500,000 are being prepared for shipment.

Officials of the rubber administrator's office do not want to measure tires against human lives, or to suggest that our sacrifice of tires can be compared to Russia's heroic sacrifices on the battle front. But they do feel the public in both countries should have the facts so they will know what we are up against when it comes to supplying synthetic tires to the home market next year.

Note: Jeffers has just gotten WPB approval for a vast program of building new tire plants, and converting others which have been making different rubber articles. Though these facilities will not all be ready until the latter part of next year, Jeffers still expects to produce the 30,000,000 tires his schedule calls for. Incidentally, the tire-plant program is being paid for by the industry, involves no cost to the government.

Work of Engineers Vitally Important To Success In Modern Warfare.

SOMEWHERE IN SICILY—(By Wireless)—During the latter days of the Sicilian campaign, I spent all my time with the combat engineers of two different divisions.

For months I have been wanting to write about engineers and when I finally got around to it, it seemed as though fate had picked out the time for me—the engineers were in it up to their ears.

Scores of times during the Sicilian fighting I heard the expression voiced by everybody from generals to private that "This is certainly an engineer's war." And indeed it was.

Every foot of our advance upon the gradually withdrawing enemy was tempoed by the speed with which our engineers could open the highways, clear the mines and by-pass the blown bridges.

In northeast Sicily, where the mountains are close together and the valleys are steep and narrow, it was an ideal country for withdrawing and the Germans made full use of it.

They blew almost every bridge they crossed. In the American area alone they destroyed around 160 bridges. They mined the by-passes around the bridges, they mined the beaches, they even mined orchards and groves of trees that would be a logical bivouac for our troops.

They didn't fatally delay us, but they did give themselves time for considerable escaping. The average blown bridge was fairly easy to by-pass and we'd have the mines cleared and a rough trail gouged out by a bulldozer within a couple of hours but, now and then, they'd pick a lulu of a spot which would take anywhere up to 24 hours to get around.

And in reading of the work of these engineers you must understand that a 24-hour job over here would take many days in normal construction practice. The mine detector and the bulldozer are the two magic instruments of our engineering. As one sergeant said, "This has been a bulldozer campaign."

In Sicily, our army would have been as helpless without the bulldozer as it would have been without the jeep. The bridges in Sicily were blown much more completely than they were in Tunisia.

Back there they'd just drop one span with explosives. But over here they'd blow down the whole damn bridge, from abutment to abutment. They used as high as a thousand pounds of explosives to a bridge and on one long, seven-span bridge they blew all seven spans. It was really senseless and the pure waste of the thing outraged our engineers. Knocking down one or two spans would have delayed us just as much as destroying all of them.

THE BRIDGES of Sicily are graceful and beautiful old arches of stone or brick-facing, with rubble fill, and shattering them so completely was something like chopping down a shade tree or defacing a church.

They'll all have to be rebuilt after the war and it's going to take a lot more money than necessary to replace all those hundreds of spans. But I suppose the Germans and Italians figured dear old Uncle Sam would pay for it all, anyhow, so they might as well have their fun.

Frequently the Germans, by blowing out a road carved out of the side of a sheer cliff, caused us more trouble than by bridge blowing. In these instances, it was often impossible to by-pass at all, so traffic had to be held up until an emergency bridge could be thrown across the gap.

Once in a while you would come to a bridge that hadn't been blown. Usually that was because the river bed was so flat, and by-passing so easy, it wasn't worth wasting explosives. Driving across a whole bridge makes you feel funny, almost immoral.

We have one whole bridge the Germans didn't count on. They had it all prepared for blowing and left one man behind to set off the charge at the last moment. But he never got it done. Our advance patrols spotted him and shot the villain dead.

THE GERMANS were even more prodigal with mines here than in Tunisia. Engineers of the 45th Division found one mine field, covering six acres, containing 800 mines. Our losses from mines has been fairly heavy, especially among officers. They scout ahead to survey demolitions, and run into mines before the detecting parties get there.

The enemy hit two high spots in their demolition and mine planting. One was when they dropped a 50-yard strip of cliff-ledge coast road, overhanging the sea, with no possible way of by-passing.

The other was when they planted mines along the road that crosses the lava beds in the foothills north of Mount Etna. The metal in the lava threw our mine detectors helter-skelter, and we had a terrible time finding the mines.

A Farmer's Diary — By CALVIN A. BYERS

'Yes--Bananas'

I REMEMBER the first banana I ever tasted. My father brought it home—a rare morsel, wrapped in tinfoil—and my mother divided it into eight pieces, one for each of the family.

That was forty-odd years ago. Since then bananas have sold in every village and hamlet, often at the low price of six pounds for a quarter. Shipped in from Middle America and the West Indies, I have seen lines of colored workers unload great cargoes of the fruit at the Tampa wharf, tossing the fruit hampers down the line, from man to man with a rhythmic swing. Hard work—yes—but the fruit was unbruised.

On a single banana tree, in our yard at St. Petersburg, one winter, a few specimens appeared and I thought to enjoy an especial goodness by letting them ripen on the tree. I was disappointed. The fruit was mealy and lacked aroma. It cracked and attracted bugs.

Now, in my mail this week, comes the information that millions of pounds of bananas have rotted and gone to waste in the countries south of the border, while U. S. shipping has been diverted to winning the war. The Middle American farmer has pocketed his loss and gone to work on highways, sponsored by his government, in collaboration with our own, as a means of wartime livelihood and mutual benefit later.

It is interesting to me to know that the Apple Growers of this country have gone on record as desirous of helping save the banana crop. Such co-operation between fruit growers of different nations has not been always possible. The present move is calculated to influence our government to release a part of the maritime shipping, as soon as it can, to bring bananas across the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean. With the submarine menace checked, it would seem likely that soon we shall have the tropical fruit back in our markets.

But do not worry, that they must be picked green and allowed to ripen in transit. They are best that way.

HEALTH QUIZ

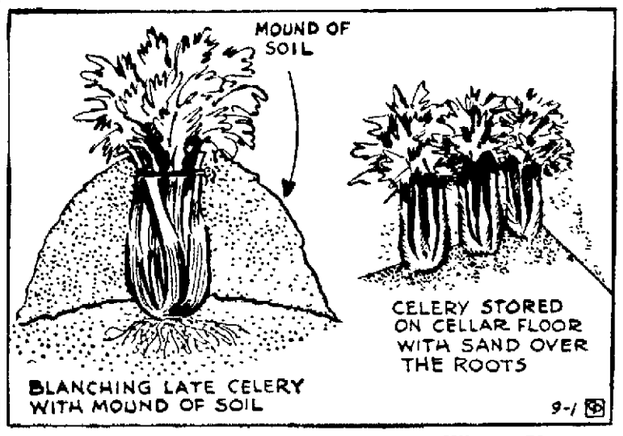
	YES	NO
Do you have poor digestion?	☐	☐
Do you feel headachy after eating?	☐	☐
Do you get sour or upset easily?	☐	☐
Do you feel tired—listless?	☐	☐

Now everyone knows that to get the good out of the food you eat—you must digest it properly. But what most people don't know is that Nature must produce about two pints of the digestive juice—liver bile—each day to help digest your food. If Nature fails—your food may remain undigested—lie sour and heavy in your digestive tract.

Thus, it is simple to see that one way to aid digestion is to increase the flow of liver bile. Now, Carter's Little Liver Pills start to increase this flow quickly for thousands—often in as little as thirty minutes. When bile flow increases, your digestion may improve. And, soon you're on the road to feeling better—which is what you're after.

Don't depend on artificial aids to counteract indigestion—when Carter's aid digestion after Nature's own order, when taken as directed. Get Carter's Little Liver Pills today—at any drugstore—only 25c. You will be glad you did.

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Storing Victory Garden Celery for Winter Use.

By DEAN HALIDAY

Released by Central Press Ass'n.

Those who have grown celery in their Victory garden are concerned, of course, with storing it for winter use. There are several ways in which celery can be stored.

Celery which is to be used early can be left right in the garden and banked with earth, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. Celery for later use can be stored in trenches. Make the trench 10 to 12 inches wide and deep enough so that the tops of the leaves will only be two or three inches above soil level. Pack the celery in close together with whatever soil will adhere to the roots. The stalks and leaves must be dry when stored. Boards are nailed together to form a trough-shaped roof over the trench. This roof should shed rain or melting snow. During warm weather this roof should be lifted and braced with a stone to give ample ventilation. As severe cold weather sets in, add earth, straw, hay or other insulating material over the roof to give protection against freezing.

When there is only a small amount of celery to be stored, it should be dug with roots and soil attached and placed in moist sand on the cellar floor, as illustrated, or in a deep box having sand or loose soil in the bottom. Set the box in a cool cellar and keep the soil moist, but the tops must be kept dry.

Work Finished On Restoring Lake Level at Park

With improvements at North Lake park nearing completion, the park lake has been restored to its former level and water is pouring over a new dam at the east end of the lake, Park Superintendent Frank Burton said today.

During recent weeks, the old bridge and dam at the lower end of the lake have been removed and replaced by a new dam and spillway. A roadway over the top of a big tile replaced the bridge. The work was done by R. O. Darling, Mansfield contractor.

Burton said park employes would re-set the cannons, build new steps, and re-seed the hill back of the pavilion where the contracting firm on the other project hauled most of the earth that was excavated at the end of the lake.

Landscaping of the newly-excavated areas will not be done until next spring after the recently-moved earth has settled, Burton said.

Have a "Coke" = Cead Mile Failte

(A HUNDRED THOUSAND WELCOMES)

...or how Americans make friends in Ireland

Cead Mile Failte—a hundred thousand welcomes—says the kindly Irishman when he meets a stranger. The American soldier says it another way. Have a "Coke", says he, and in three words he has said Greetings, pal. It's a phrase that works as well in Belfast as in Boston. Around the globe Coca-Cola stands for the pause that refreshes—has become the high-sign between friendly-minded people.

"Coke" = Coca-Cola
It's natural for popular names to acquire friendly abbreviations. That's why you hear Coca-Cola called "Coke".

MANSFIELD, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1943.

The English language is spoken by 270 million persons—or at least some parts of it.

It's September now, you know—have you looked after that little matter of having the heating equipment inspected and filling the coal bin?

It now appears that people will have to be satisfied with being told when the invasion took place, rather than having the time and place announced in advance.

Second Front Awaits Readiness

LACK of complete readiness of Great Britain and the United States to start a land invasion of western Europe, and thus establish what Russia would consider an actual "second front", seems apparent from the tone of Prime Minister Churchill's address in Quebec yesterday afternoon.

Churchill's high tribute to the fighting power of Russia, without which, he said, "the terrific aerial attack against Germany would not have been possible", included admission that he did not blame Russia for any criticism it has levelled at its allies for not having opened a second front on the continent.

It was in this connection that Mr. Churchill indicated invasion of western Europe will come only "when there is every chance of military success, unswayed by political considerations."

Emphasis in the Churchill talk was given to the desirability of a United Nations conference at which Russia would be represented, so as to provide "a unit of decision between the three great opponents of Hitlerite tyranny." Explanation was repeated that it would have been inappropriate for Russia to have been represented at the Quebec conference, which was mainly concerned with "heating and inflaming the war against Japan," with which country the Soviet government has a five-year treaty of non-aggression.

While the prime minister's talk radiated complete confidence in ultimate victory, he described speculation on when the war will end, as "vain and unprofitable"—which conforms to views of all observers whose judgment can be trusted.

Time required to win the war will depend more largely on what people in the United States do in the future, in providing war materials, supplies and food, than on what has been done thus far—and investing in war bonds will be a necessary part of individual participation.

Discriminatory Margarine Tax

SCARCITY of butter, and the government subsidy of five cents a pound to keep the price lower than it would otherwise be, serve to revive the subject of discriminatory taxes on margarine, which is quite generally recognized as a satisfactory substitute for butter in many of its uses.

While the ration point requirement in buying margarine is only four per pound, as against ten red points demanded with purchase of a pound of butter, the prohibitive tax of 10 cents a pound on colored margarine results in only the white article being sold, with a capsule of harmless yellow coloring provided for home use.

Discriminatory taxes on the manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers of margarine are obviously designed to restrict competition of this commodity with butter and it is interesting to note that eleven northwestern states have their own prohibitive taxes which prevent sale of margarine in those states.

Margarine should, of course, be plainly labeled as such, but a tax of 10 cents a pound on the colored product is entirely without present justification.

'Stay-at-Home' Holiday Coming

NEXT Monday's observance of Labor day will take the form of a "stay-at-home" holiday for many people who had been accustomed to make this the occasion for a three-day trip of some sort.

Because of gasoline shortage and crowding of plane, train and bus transportation systems, emphasis is being placed on the necessity for avoiding unnecessary travel during this holiday period.

It is pointed out that anyone making a trip in a public conveyance for no better reason than to enjoy a holiday outing is contributing toward breakdown of the country's transportation systems.

Aside from other considerations, there is much war work to be done, and it should be kept in mind that there are no holidays for men on the battle fronts.

South Africa Supports Allies

ONE COUNTRY where the people approve of the war and its management is South Africa. This has just been proved by the elections.

Ever since the war began, General Smuts, former Boer leader in the war against England 40 years ago, and in the last war a member of the British Imperial War Council, has been prime minister, carrying out a full-war policy. Against the war has been the Reunited Nationalist party, led by Dr. D. F. Malan. Playing Boer against Briton, this party had nearly as many votes as Smuts in the outgoing parliament. Grievances that pile up against any government in war time were thought to give Malan a good chance.

Instead, thanks in large part of the soldier vote, Smuts will have 107 supporters in the next parliament out of 150. This ensures not only support for the war, but for Smuts' well-known belief in international co-operation afterwards.

Salerno's Place In History

SALERNO, bombarded by the United Nations, made the headlines for the first time in its history. This is not to say that this ancient Italian city is now famous for the first time, because once it was among the best-known towns in Europe. But that was before the day of headlines and even newspapers.

Salerno was the seat of the first European university, and of a school of medicine whose pupils went out all over Europe. A popular book on health, "The Rule of the School of Salerno," was read and followed for centuries. Now Salerno figures only as a minor town ruled by Fascists.

Another seasonal problem will be how to dispose of fallen leaves, now that there's no WPA to gather them up.

Of course it will be up to the Allies to clean up the mess in Messina.

Counter-Attack In Russia Will Be Test for Nazi War Machine

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

NEVER since Hitler broke his pledged word and attacked Russia has the position of his armies on the eastern front been so precarious as it has become with the loss of his right wing anchor—Taganrog, on the Sea of Azov.

That right wing is now like a pennant on a flag-pole, its fluttering loose end subject to the winds that sweep across it. Of course, that's a very unmilitary and exaggerated figure of speech, but it will have served its purpose if it emphasizes the danger of the Nazi position.

Having taken this major stronghold, which is one of the vital parts of the gateway to the oil fields of the Caucasus, the Red army is now reported crushing its way steadily westward along the coast of the Sea of Azov.

Small wonder that Marshal Stalin ordered a 124-gun salute in Moscow in honor of the Red army, while all Russia exulted in the prowess of their men at arms.

The fall of Taganrog was effected by the application of a pair of great pincers to the Hun line. The Reds thrust fiercely into the German defenses forty miles above Taganrog and started a turning movement southward towards that port. Meantime, another Russian force was smashing directly at the Nazi anchor from the east. The Hitlerites had to run or be surrounded.

Similar turning movements are being driven into the German line as far north as the Kharkov area, and some 800,000 Nazi troops are in danger of encirclement.

Thus Hitler's whole southern wing is being forced back, as has been forecast so many times in this column in recent weeks. Having been torn loose from his Taganrog anchor, the fuehrer now is faced with two nasty alternatives:

1 HE MUST stage a heavy counter-attack in the Donets basin to the north of Taganrog and fling the Reds back, thus restoring his previous positions.

2 FAILING in this, he must continue his withdrawal until his whole vast front from the Sea of Azov northward to Leningrad, a distance of more than a thousand miles, has been pulled back under fierce Russian attack to the line of the great Dnieper river.

If the Germans have the strength they may be expected to counterattack. I was chatting on this point with my colleague, General H. S. Sewell, the distinguished British military expert, and he remarked that "heavy counter-attacks must be expected in the Donets, and failure in this respect may well be regarded as a sign of Nazi weakness."

That seems to sum the matter up neatly. If the invaders don't counter-attack, or if they make the attempt and fail, it will be significant as showing that the German war machine has lost a tremendous amount of that awful striking power which long terrified the world.

SHOULD the Germans be forced to retire to the line of the Dnieper, one would expect them to make a back-to-the-wall stand to hold the Crimea. If you will refer to your maps (don't tell me that you haven't got them out) you will see that the Dnieper bulges out to the east, just north of the Crimea. You will note, too, that there's a railway which touches the point of this bulge by Zaporozhe and runs south through Melitopol into the Crimea.

It's logical to expect the Germans to try to hold along that railway, if they get pushed back that far.

Should they be unable to maintain this position they would lose the Crimea, and the Black sea once more would be opened up in the north to the Russians — a grand windfall for the Reds.

Meanwhile Herr Hitler has all but lost his last toe-hold on the rich Donets basin, with its coal and far-reaching wheat fields.

To complete the picture we should recognize that the fall rains are near in Russia, and their arrival will slow the Russian operations. As a matter of fact one would think the Reds must be about due for a breather after their sensational exertions.

Looking Back

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Saturday, Sept. 1, 1923.

Terrific earthquake shook Japan and damage to Tokyo and other cities was described as "appalling." An immediate appeal for aid was made to the United States.

City council decided to present $125,000 bond issue to voters, to carry through street improvement program.

Transfer companies were kept busy as this was "moving day" for many Mansfield families.

Russell C. Terman returned to Mansfield after having been in China for a year.

Son was born to Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Dingler, 213 Sturges avenue.

Harry Salter, 76, pioneer Mansfield wagon maker and blacksmith, died.

Frank Cave reported to police that his auto had been stolen from parking place on East Fourth street.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Twenty years ago today, Sept. 1, 1923, earthquakes, followed by tidal waves and by fires, killed more than 100,000 persons in Japan. Tokyo was almost obliterated. Yokohama, a dozen other towns, were made shambles. The nation which stood firmest as a friend—which poured out its aid to the stricken Japanese the quickest, was the United States.

Dave Boone Says:

JOE STALIN may have Germany licked before the other partners get into high. Those Russians are slamming the super race all over the lot, and it's a big lot.

The Nazis are so groggy the best they can do is to beat Joe to the announcement that they've been jolted again. Every defeat for Adolf is broadcast as all according to Hitler's plans. But no other paperhanger ever made a specialty of claiming even the fall of his ladder represented progress in papering the room.

There's terrific eyebrow raising in New York over the district attorney's allegation that a judge won a nomination for a high court through the accepted aid of a notorious racketeer. But I can't join in the look of surprise over the charge that political leaders, civic biggies and candidates for office don't exactly shrink from contact with the bad boys.

Any observer of the American scene knows that too many of our lily-white leaders shamelessly show more than a tolerant attitude toward the racket boys and welcome their help instead of treating them with disgust and contempt.

If you want to meet the really top-flight gangsters at the race track, ball parks or big political banquets the thing to do is to get a politician to introduce you. I don't mind an example being made of somebody, but I wish it could be the really big fellows and not the small fry.

Timely Editorial

A More Refined Name.

It apears to be taken for granted in Washington that the only way out of the high cost of living blind-alley in which the country has landed is to subsidize it with the people's money. That is the real meaning of all plans for paying the farmer enough out of public funds to keep him happy, instead of letting him collect directly from consumers, who thereupon would become unhappy and insist on getting wage boosts even faster than they have been getting them up to now.

It is of interest, therefore, that War Food Administrator Marvin Jones has found a way to speak of subsidies without using the word, which has a bad taste for Americans. They are to be known henceforth in the language of persuasion as "price support." The idea no longer is to subsidize inflated farm prices but to support them. It is simple, understandable, clear, convincing and perhaps it is even justifiable. But it is still subsidies.—Canton Repository.

Anti-Willkieite Announces As Candidate for GOP Nomination

WASHINGTON—A new Republican candidate for president of the United States has bobbed up in the midwest recently. He is Wheeler McMillen, editor of the Farm Journal, owned by Pennsylvania's monied political boss Joe Pew.

Mr. McMillen has been making the rounds of Indiana, Nebraska, Iowa and the corn belt. His reception has been one of surprised speculation. Since Mr. McMillen obviously has no chance of getting anywhere, it is presumed that GOP's anti-Willkie Joe Pew sent him out as a decoy to attract farm votes away from Willkie and generally to confuse the issue.

However, one interesting thing turned up about Mr. McMillen in Indiana. He is the president of the Chemurgic Council, which aims to promote the use of agricultural products in industry.

However, when Senator Gillette of Iowa led a brilliant crusade for the use of alcohol from grain in making synthetic rubber, McMillen strangely enough took a strong position that rubber should be made exclusively from petroleum, not from grain products. (McMillen's boss Joe Pew of Sun Oil is one of the biggest oil men in the country and is operating an oil synthetic plant for the government.)

So when McMillen put himself in the position of working against the use of farm products in industry, outraged Hassel Schenck, head of the Farm Bureau in Indiana, called for his resignation as president of the Chemurgic Council. This bobbed up to haunt Mr. McMillen on his tour through Indiana recently.

Newsprint Extravaganza.

WHILE President Roosevelt and Prime Ministers Churchill and Mackenzie King were cementing friendship of the British Empire and the United States in Ottawa, an announcement was made in Windsor, Ontario, that made many U. S. publishers broiling mad, especially in Detroit.

The Windsor Star, published directly across the river from Detroit, announced that on Sept. 3 it would issue a 180 page special anniversary edition, including a 64-page rotogravure section.

Like most newspapers throughout the country, the Detroit papers have had to cut down their editorial content to get within the strict WPB limits on newsprint. They have had to cancel hundreds of thousands of dollars in advertising contracts and to limit even the size of want ads.

Canadian newspapers apparently have not felt the pinch. It is fine to unite the sentiments of the United States, Canada and England, some observers feel, but this is no time to flaunt peacetime anniversary editions in the face of the U. S. press when the wartime shortage is supposedly so acute.

Tire Plant for Russia.

FEW PEOPLE are aware of the fact that one of our biggest tire plants, with a capacity of 20,000 tires a day, has been literaly lifted from its Henry Ford foundations in Dearborn, Mich., and sent to the Soviets.

It is probably the greatest lend-lease operation on record. The plan was to have the Red army ride to victory on tires made by U. S. machinery.

This operation was carried through despite the opposition of Rubber Administrator Big Bill Jeffers, who found after he first came to Washington that the deal already had been made. He declared, however, that our own synthetic rubber program would require all the tire manufacturing capacity the country has ever had—and more—and that a whole plant should not be carried off to another country.

Lend-Lease argued that the U. S. rubber shortage made the Ford plant idle, but Jeffers countered that it would not be idle long, in view of the new production of synthetic rubber.

Jeffers even carried the question directly to the president. But FDR told him that a commitment had been made, and a protocol (treaty) been drawn up with Russia by which the tire plant was promised in writing.

So the rubber director shrugged his shoulders. He now learns that it required six months to dismantle the plant and ship it to the seaboard. It was sent from Pacific Coast ports to Vladivostok, then across the Siberian wastes to Russia, where its location is a military secret. So far as can be learned here, the factory is not yet in operation.

If the Russians can make it run, it will be used to produce about 10,000 heavy-duty military tires a day. The U. S. production of 20,000 was in terms of passenger car tires.

In addition to the tire factory, we have now shipped 2,000,000 tires to Russia, and another 500,000 are being prepared for shipment.

Officials of the rubber administrator's office do not want to measure tires against human lives, or to suggest that our sacrifice of tires can be compared to Russia's heroic sacrifices on the battle front. But they do feel the public in both countries should have the facts so they will know what we are up against when it comes to supplying synthetic tires to the home market next year.

Note: Jeffers has just gotten WPB approval for a vast program of building new tire plants, and converting others which have been making different rubber articles. Though these facilities will not all be ready until the latter part of next year, Jeffers still expects to produce the 30,000,000 tires his schedule calls for. Incidentally, the tire-plant program is being paid for by the industry, involves no cost to the government.

Work of Engineers Vitally Important To Success In Modern Warfare.

SOMEWHERE IN SICILY—(By Wireless)—During the latter days of the Sicilian campaign, I spent all my time with the combat engineers of two different divisions.

For months I have been wanting to write about engineers and when I finally got around to it, it seemed as though fate had picked out the time for me—the engineers were in it up to their ears.

Scores of times during the Sicilian fighting I heard the expression voiced by everybody from generals to private that "This is certainly an engineer's war." And indeed it was.

Every foot of our advance upon the gradually withdrawing enemy was tempoed by the speed with which our engineers could open the highways, clear the mines and by-pass the blown bridges.

In northeast Sicily, where the mountains are close together and the valleys are steep and narrow, it was an ideal country for withdrawing and the Germans made full use of it.

They blew almost every bridge they crossed. In the American area alone they destroyed around 160 bridges. They mined the by-passes around the bridges, they mined the beaches, they even mined orchards and groves of trees that would be a logical bivouac for our troops.

They didn't fatally delay us, but they did give themselves time for considerable escaping. The average blown bridge was fairly easy to by-pass and we'd have the mines cleared and a rough trail gouged out by a bulldozer within a couple of hours but, now and then, they'd pick a lulu of a spot which would take anywhere up to 24 hours to get around.

And in reading of the work of these engineers you must understand that a 24-hour job over here would take many days in normal construction practice. The mine detector and the bulldozer are the two magic instruments of our engineering. As one sergeant said, "This has been a bulldozer campaign."

In Sicily, our army would have been as helpless without the bulldozer as it would have been without the jeep. The bridges in Sicily were blown much more completely than they were in Tunisia.

Back there they'd just drop one span with explosives. But over here they'd blow down the whole damn bridge, from abutment to abutment. They used as high as a thousand pounds of explosives to a bridge and on one long, seven-span bridge they blew all seven spans. It was really senseless and the pure waste of the thing outraged our engineers. Knocking down one or two spans would have delayed us just as much as destroying all of them.

THE BRIDGES of Sicily are graceful and beautiful old arches of stone or brick-facing, with rubble fill, and shattering them so completely was something like chopping down a shade tree or defacing a church.

They'll all have to be rebuilt after the war and it's going to take a lot more money than necessary to replace all those hundreds of spans. But I suppose the Germans and Italians figured dear old Uncle Sam would pay for it all, anyhow, so they might as well have their fun.

Frequently the Germans, by blowing out a road carved out of the side of a sheer cliff, caused us more trouble than by bridge blowing. In these instances, it was often impossible to by-pass at all, so traffic had to be held up until an emergency bridge could be thrown across the gap.

Once in a while you would come to a bridge that hadn't been blown. Usually that was because the river bed was so flat, and by-passing so easy, it wasn't worth wasting explosives. Driving across a whole bridge makes you feel funny, almost immoral.

We have one whole bridge the Germans didn't count on. They had it all prepared for blowing and left one man behind to set off the charge at the last moment. But he never got it done. Our advance patrols spotted him and shot the villain dead.

THE GERMANS were even more prodigal with mines here than in Tunisia. Engineers of the 45th Division found one mine field, covering six acres, containing 800 mines. Our losses from mines has been fairly heavy, especially among officers. They scout ahead to survey demolitions, and run into mines before the detecting parties get there.

The enemy hit two high spots in their demolition and mine planting. One was when they dropped a 50-yard strip of cliff-ledge coast road, overhanging the sea, with no possible way of by-passing.

The other was when they planted mines along the road that crosses the lava beds in the foothills north of Mount Etna. The metal in the lava threw our mine detectors helter-skelter, and we had a terrible time finding the mines.

'Yes--Bananas'

I REMEMBER the first banana I ever tasted. My father brought it home—a rare morsel, wrapped in tinfoil—and my mother divided it into eight pieces, one for each of the family.

That was forty-odd years ago. Since then bananas have sold in every village and hamlet, often at the low price of six pounds for a quarter. Shipped in from Middle America and the West Indies, I have seen lines of colored workers unload great cargoes of the fruit at the Tampa wharf, tossing the fruit hampers down the line, from man to man with a rhythmic swing. Hard work—yes—but the fruit was unbruised.

On a single banana tree, in our yard at St. Petersburg, one winter, a few specimens appeared and I thought to enjoy an especial goodness by letting them ripen on the tree. I was disappointed. The fruit was mealy and lacked aroma. It cracked and attracted bugs.

Now, in my mail this week, comes the information that millions of pounds of bananas have rotted and gone to waste in the countries south of the border, while U. S. shipping has been diverted to winning the war. The Middle American farmer has pocketed his loss and gone to work on highways, sponsored by his government, in collaboration with our own, as a means of wartime livelihood and mutual benefit later.

It is interesting to me to know that the Apple Growers of this country have gone on record as desirous of helping save the banana crop. Such co-operation between fruit growers of different nations has not been always possible. The present move is calculated to influence our government to release a part of the maritime shipping, as soon as it can, to bring bananas across the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean. With the submarine menace checked, it would seem likely that soon we shall have the tropical fruit back in our markets.

But do not worry, that they must be picked green and allowed to ripen in transit. They are best that way.
